Peking Says It Would Reject Leaving Formosa in World Body

TOKYO (AP) — Red China today restated its terms for joining the United Nations: expel Nationalist China and end U.S.-Soviet domination of the world organization. They underlined the prospect that the Peking regime won't get in for a long time.

An official New China News Agency broadcast rejected as "absurd" a resolution now being debated by the U.N. General Assembly. Authorized primarily by Italy, it would set up a committee to study the question of China's representation

House Leaders See No Reason For More Study

New Evidence on Assassination Not Revealed, Ford Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of both parties in the House of Representatives have rejected suggestions that Congress conduct its own investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Suggestions for a congressional investigation came from an adviser to the late president and several other sources, including Life magazine.

The magazine quoted Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who was riding with Kennedy in Dallas and was wounded during the shooting, as disagreeing with some of the findings of the Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination.

The controversy came to a boil Tuesday on the third anniversary of Kennedy's death.

Rep. Carl Albert, the Democratic leader, said, "There is no new evidence I have seen that would justify even considering that Congress take this up."

Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the Republican leader, who served on the Warren Commission that investigated the assassination, said "unless there is any new significant evidence, I don't think there is any need for Congress to investigate the Kennedy assassination — and I know of no such evidence."

Both Ford and Albert agreed that if some significant new facts are turned up they would not object to a new investigation.

Ford said recent books and articles casting doubt on the conclusion that Oswald acted alone are only "speculation based on the information, testimony and evidence carefully considered by the Warren Commission."

U.N. Accuses North Korea of Firing at Ships

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The U.N. Command today accused North Korea of firing at three South Korean navy patrol boats and of shooting at an unarmed training plane that strayed over the demilitarized zone.

The command said Communist shore batteries opened fire on the ships Tuesday as they cruised off the east coast just south of the armistice line separating North and South Korea.

Around 40 rounds were fired by the Communists, and the South Korean ships replied with 14 rounds, they said. No injuries were reported but one ship was damaged slightly.

The North Korean Central News Agency earlier had claimed the boats were American. It said the vessels intruded into North Korean coastal waters and "fired scores of shells at our coast."

State Plan for Reorganization Runs Into Block

Kellett Committee
Proposals Termed
Too Undramatic

MADISON (AP) — The sputtering drive to streamline state government stumbled over the influential majority leader of the Wisconsin Senate Tuesday.

Sen. Robert Knowles, R-New Richmond, told the Kellett task force any omnibus package was "doomed to failure" and suggested reorganization efforts be divided into a number of specific bills.

"All the eggs are not going to hatch. I can tell you," the senator said.

Knowles, brother of the governor, made the comments as the task force's efforts to consolidate the dozens of state agencies into a cabinet-style government began crumbling with decisions to leave many departments intact.

"Sex Appeal" One task force member suggested the effort needed the dramatic approach of a single bill as planned at present and noted the new assault on water pollution had been passed in that manner. Knowles replied, "It's a matter of sex appeal and this doesn't have sex appeal."

The task force, headed by retired paper executive William R. Kellett of Menasha, backed

Laird Likes Romney

Percy Ducks Query On GOP's Favorite

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen.-elect Charles H. Percy says he has no favorite now for the 1968 GOP presidential nomination.

The Illinois Republican declined to say at a jammed news conference Tuesday whether he thinks Michigan Gov. George Romney or former Vice President Richard M. Nixon is in the lead now.

Pressed on this point, Percy said frankly that "if it looks to you like I'm sidestepping and ducking that question, you're absolutely right."

He said it made no sense to line up behind any man "before you have a single announced candidate and before you know where some of those candidates stand."

He answered "yes" when asked whether a man who didn't support the 1964 GOP presidential nominee could be the 1968 standard-bearer.

Campaigned for GOP Barry Goldwater has predicted that no one who didn't back him two years ago will get the nod Romney didn't back Goldwater, although he contends he campaigned for the Republican party.

The chairman of the House Republican Conference, Rep. Melvin R. Laird of Wisconsin, told an AP interviewer today he thinks Romney now is the front-runner for the 1968 GOP presidential nomination. He said he had considered Nixon as the frontrunner before the Nov. 8 elections.

At his news conference Percy displayed something of a lack of togetherness with the pronouncements that have been coming out of the Puerto Rico meeting between Romney and Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York.

The senator-elect said he was confused by all the talk on Rockefeller's part about a Republican "consensus" and on Romney's about the need for GOP leadership. He said, in effect, that Rockefeller has a perfect right to promote Romney if he chooses. But he made it clear he wasn't at this point.

As to his own future, Percy said he could foresee "no circumstances under which I would be expected to do other than be a good senator for the next six years."

Ted Sorensen
Says RFK's Job
Is in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Theodore C. Sorensen, former special counsel to President John F. Kennedy, said today that nothing would be "more stupid and self-defeating" for Democrats than any effort to run Robert F. Kennedy against either President Johnson or Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968.

"Senator Kennedy's first responsibility in the rebuilding of our party is here in New York," said Sorensen, adding that both "logic and hope" cast the junior senator from New York in the role of party head in the state

U.S. Pilots Step Up Air Assaults in Viet Nam

Gen. Taylor Dislikes Halt In Bombing

NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, holding that the bombing of North Viet Nam gives the United States blue chips for any peace talks, warns "don't pay a blue chip by giving up the bombing to get negotiations started."

He called for a "clear eye and a hard-nosed policy" in any approach to negotiations.

"We should come out not only with our shirt, but with a free and independent South Viet Nam," the retired general said.

Taylor, a special adviser to President Johnson and former ambassador to South Viet Nam, spoke Tuesday night at a dinner of the Manufacturing Chemists Association.

'Boost in Morale' The air attacks on the north have given a "great morale boost" to the Saigon government and has "immobilized" 200,000 to 300,000 North Vietnamese, the general said.

Abandonment of the bombing of the north "would have a tremendous negative effect on South Viet Nam and they might possibly quit fighting," he declared.

Taylor said ground action is going increasingly well as a result of more troops and "for the first time we are putting a brake on the expansion of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong."

Four Die in Plane Crash Near Madison

University Students Were Heading East
For Thanksgiving

MADISON (AP) — Four University of Wisconsin students leaving for a Thanksgiving vacation were killed Tuesday night as their single-engine airplane plowed into a farm field in fog and mist.

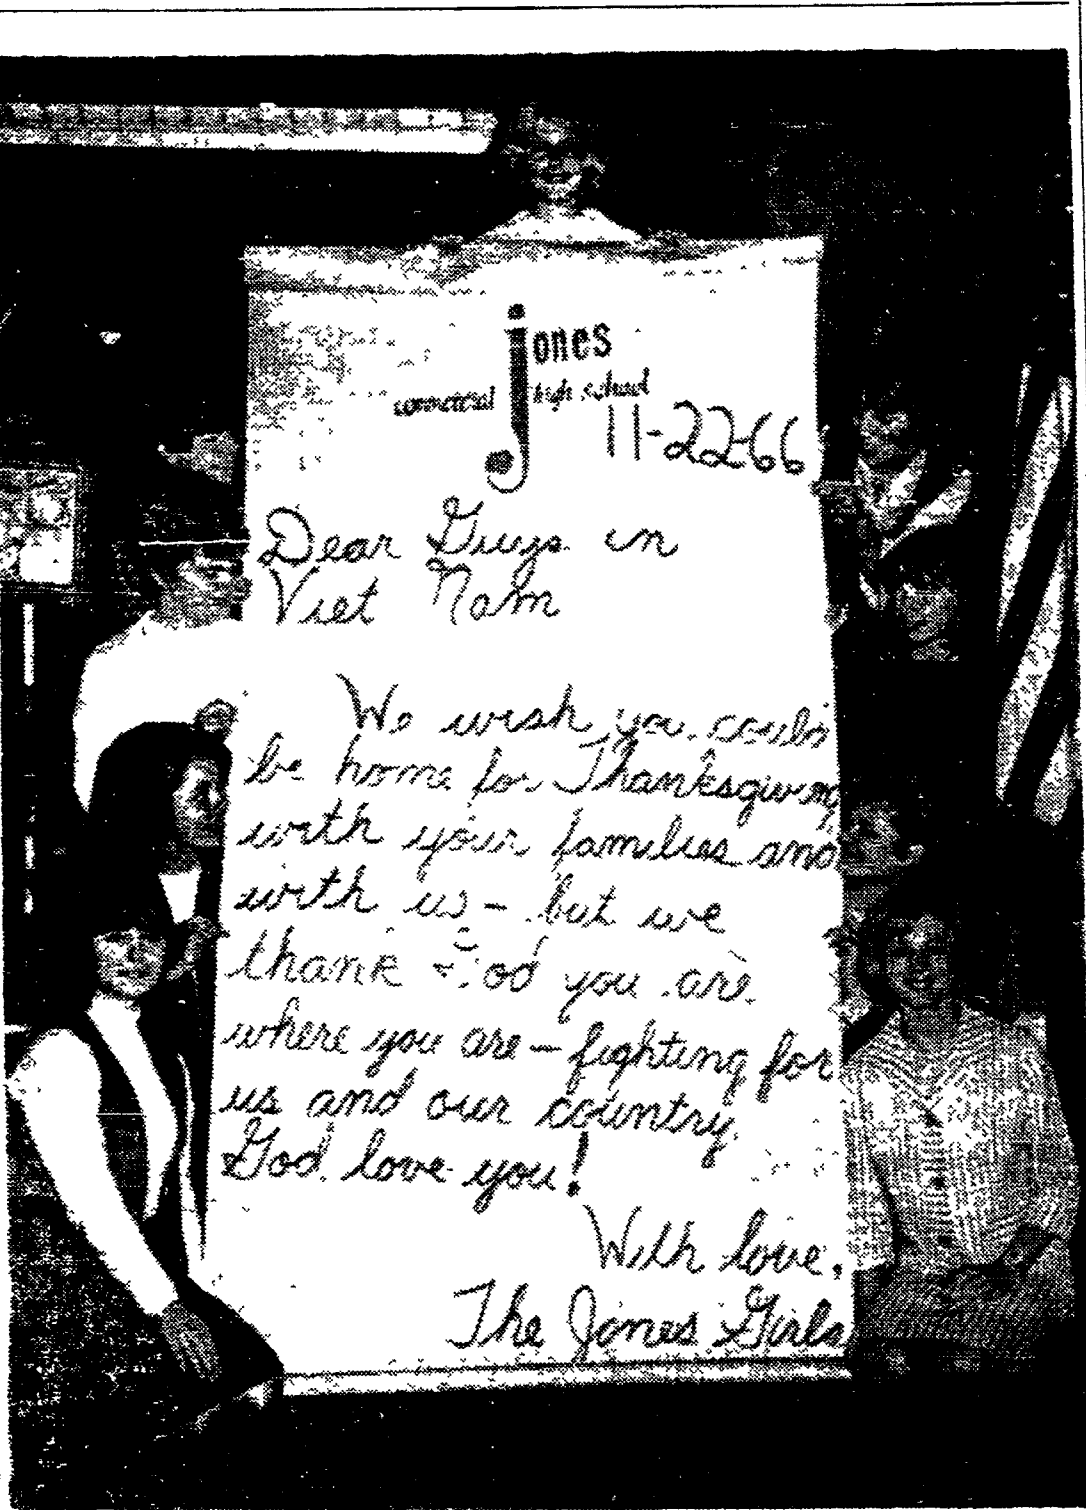

Two coeds killed evidently had responded to the pilot's offer of a vacation ride home posted on a bulletin board at the university, authorities said.

The aircraft crashed only five miles east of Madison half an hour after takeoff.

The victims were identified as Richard I. Gates, 26, West Covina, Calif., who was the pilot; Thomas M. Chapman, 23, San Diego, Calif.; Margaret Paula Jugel, 20, Oakland, N.J., and Carol L. Chalfin, 19, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Near Highway Officials at Trux Air Field in Madison said the flight plan listed Islip, N.Y., as their destination.

The aircraft plunged into the rain-soaked field within sight of Interstate Highway 94, the main route between Madison and Milwaukee. Curiosity-seekers clogged traffic on the expressway.

Gemini 12 News Conference

Aldrin Tells of Phenomenon

MANNED SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) — Gemini 12's champion spacewalker said today he saw a phenomenon while working outside his spaceship: rubbing his fingers together sparked a faint glow.

"I noticed the peculiar thing during the night pass," Air Force Maj. Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin Jr. told a news conference. "I think it's something we should look at."

Aldrin, who teamed with Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. for the four-day Gemini 12 flight that rang down the curtain on Project Gemini, had no explanation for what it might be.

Over-all, Aldrin said, spacewalking "went quite a bit smoother than I actually thought it would."

Brief Disappointment Aldrin, a rookie who mastered the hostilities of space with three historic ventures totaling 5½ hours, returned from space with the world's title for space walking.

"We didn't run into a single problem that gave us any trouble," he noted.

Lovell said the two men had a brief period of disappointment shortly after they got into space and were chasing an Agena rocket for a rendezvous.

"Buzz noticed that the computer wasn't giving any change in range," Lovell said, explaining that the radar was supposed to feed the computer with data.

He added that he then looked at the control board and noticed that the radar had apparently lost its lock-on.

"For a minute we just looked at each other and said: 'Ah, it couldn't happen to us,'" Lovell said.

So, the two pilots resorted to their visual means of catching the target while not using the radar — something never done on a Gemini flight.

"I'm sort of glad we had radar failure because it gave us a chance to use the backup charts," Lovell added while noting that they were equipped with a sequence of secondary ways to complete the rendezvous.

"I think the maneuvers we made were more accurate than those given on the ground," he said.

Aldrin's travels, highlighted by a stroll lasting two hours and nine minutes, proved that by resting frequently and using proper restraint equipment, man can do meaningful work outside his capsule. Aldrin did not encounter the fatigue problems strollers before him met.

"I think we learned the great value of a restraint system," Aldrin said.

'Founder' of Thanksgiving

Virginia Wants Some of the Gravy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever historians say, Virginia has crept into presidential proclamations on Thanksgiving to share billing with Massachusetts and the Pilgrims.

Time was when almost anybody knew that Thanksgiving, the Pilgrim Fathers and Plymouth, Mass., were intertwined as firmly as turkey and cranberry sauce.

Now there are Virginia colonists too.

They showed up in the 1963 and 1964 proclamations, faded in 1965 and came back this year when President Johnson said: "If we consider the fervor with which those colonists in Virginia and Massachusetts gave, when they had so little, we are taught how much deeper should our thanks be — when we have so much."

Virginians started contending years ago that the first Thanksgiving was not held in Plymouth in 1621 as most Americans believe but occurred two years earlier at Berkeley Plantation on the James River near Jamestown, Va.

After the 1962 proclamation, a Virginian wrote President John F. Kennedy protesting that it made no mention of that early Thanksgiving in Virginia.

Kennedy, a Massachusetts man, in 1963 not only mentioned Virginia but mentioned that state first: "Over three centuries ago our forefathers in Virginia and in Massachusetts far from home in a lonely wilderness set aside a time for Thanksgiving."

In 1964, President Johnson also acknowledged Virginia first, saying, "So as our forefathers in Virginia, in New England and throughout

Ground War Subsides for Thanksgiving

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. fliers stepped up their attacks in North and South Viet Nam while on the ground the fighting lapsed today into small scattered clashes.

B52 bombers pounded Communist positions in support of the American forces pressing Operation Attleboro in Tay Ninh Province and those in Operation Paul Revere in the central highlands.

The weather improved over North Viet Nam Tuesday for the first time in nearly two weeks, and U.S. pilots flew 59 bombing missions, an increase over recent days but still far below the average 150 missions of ideal flying days.

Plane Lost One American plane was reported shot down, a two-man Air Force F4C Phantom jet. Both fliers were listed as missing. It was the 427th plane reported lost over North Viet Nam and the first since Nov. 11.

On another front, the U.S. mission announced a new, major effort to spur the pacification program, the civilian-directed campaign to win the allegiance of South Viet Nam's masses to the Saigon government.

Deputy U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter, 52, was named to head the new attempt to make the flagging program succeed.

As the ground fighting subsided, the 360,000 American troops in Viet Nam and the 60,000 men offshore on 7th Fleet ships looked forward to the traditional turkey-and-trimmings Thanksgiving dinner Thursday.

In the scattered ground action, U.S. Marines supported by air strikes, artillery, naval gunfire and tanks reported killing 36 Viet Cong in clashes Tuesday near Da Nang and Chu Lai.

The Marines said they trapped one band of 25 Viet Cong on a small peninsula 13 miles southwest of Chu Lai and drove them to the sea. The Leathernecks called in artillery barrages and air strikes which killed 15 of the Viet Cong. The Marines killed the other 10 in ground fighting.

The Marines reported only light casualties.

Franco's Limited Monarch Proposal Accepted in Spain

Some Critics Call Plan Gambit To Protect Dictator's Regime

BY HAROLD K. MILKS
MADRID (AP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco's proposal to put Spain on the road to limited democratic monarchy gave hope today to the monarchists and nothing much to the 73-year-old dictator's opposition.

Generalissimo Franco

were only a subtle means to assure continuation of his regime. Others looked forward to the change as a liberalization after 27 years of dictatorship. The country's 32 million people still do not know who their next chief of state will be — or when he will take over from Franco. But they know he is scheduled to be a king and how he will be chosen.

King Contenders
The leading contenders are Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, 28-year-old grandson of the last king who is considered Franco's choice, and the prince's father, Don Juan, a 54-year-old exile in Portugal.

Franco made his proposals Tuesday in a long-awaited address to the Cortes (Parliament), which immediately approved the laws by acclamation. They will be submitted to a national referendum—Spain's second in 30 years—expected to be Dec. 14. Approval is considered certain.

Franco offered to snip off some of his autocratic powers but kept his ban on political parties.

"With us a genuine, orderly and effective democracy excludes political parties, but this in no way implies the exclusion of the legitimate contrast of opinions," he said.

Moderate Groups
Opposition sources said this decision, not included in the new laws, could drive such moderate groups as the Socialists and the Christian Democrats underground. Oppositionists who had hoped to work in cooperation with the ruling regime said Franco's declaration ruled out a "legitimate opposition."

Among the major changes, Franco proposed:
—When Franco dies or becomes incapacitated, he will be succeeded by a king nominated by the Council of the Realm and the Cabinet and ratified by the Catholics of royal blood and if not approved, a regent would reign until a suitable ruler appears. The king's powers would be limited by legislative and advisory bodies, and he would be succeeded by his first male heir.

—The new post of premier or chief of government is to be created apart from the chief of state. Franco now holds both posts. The premier would be appointed by the now inactive Council of the Realm to a five-year term. The council also would assume important advisory duties.

—The ban on public worship by Spain's 35,000 Protestants and 5,000 Jews would be removed but Roman Catholicism would remain the protected state religion.

Ex-Communist Wins Heavily In Dane Elections

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Socialist Jens Otto Krag will continue as Denmark's premier following an election swing to the left, but former Communist party chairman Aksel Larsen has emerged as the most powerful political figure in the North Atlantic ally.

Larsen, 69, quit the Communist party 10 years ago in protest against the smashing of the Hungarian revolution and founded the left-wing People's Socialist party. Like the Communist party, it vigorously opposes the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and demands unconditional U.S. withdrawal from Viet Nam.

Voters Tuesday went against pre-election predictions by giving Larsen's party 20 seats in the Parliament, double the number it won in 1964, and reduced Krag's Social Democrats by 7 seats, to 69.

Chicago Police Official Apparently Shoots Self

CHICAGO (AP) — Lt. Francis Nash, 47, head of the police gambling unit, died early today in Resurrection Hospital shortly after being shot in the head. Police said Nash apparently shot himself in the kitchen of his home. His wife and daughter said they were sitting in the living room when they heard a gunshot from the kitchen. Nash staggered through the living room, dropping a gun, then out the front door. He collapsed in the driveway.

straps and restraint boots called "golden slippers."

"We have to fix the body in position so we can devote our entire interest to the work at hand," he said. "It can be done without the waist tether, but it can't be done with the same freedom of action."

Aldrin also praised the training he had on earth, specifically the use of underwater simulations to train for work in space where there is no gravity and man has a tendency to float aimlessly.

Lovell and Aldrin captured man's first pictures of a total solar eclipse from space — a feat that took split-second timing while dashing around the world at 17,500 miles an hour.

"I thought at first we were really going to miss it," Lovell said. "The moon appeared to be too low."

As the time totality came — when the moon completely blotted out the sun — it became more apparent they were right on target. The cockpit was darkened, Lovell noted.

A shield had been placed across Lovell's window to protect his eyes from the intense sun rays.

"In an impulse I ripped off the disk," Lovell said. "Just for a few seconds, I took a glimpse of the moon. It was quite a beautiful sight."

Vegetarians' Holiday

No Drumstick, Thank You, Just Pass the Rutabagas

CHICAGO (AP) — There won't be any traditional Turkey Day arguments in some Chicago homes over who gets the wishbone and who gets the drumstick, because there's no wishbone in squash and rutabagas don't have drumsticks. Baked squash and rutabagas are just two of the delights which will supplant turkey on the Thanksgiving menu in vegetarian homes.

The only hint of the holiday will be an occasional glass of cranberry juice and a slice of pumpkin pie. Anita Mantel, librarian of the Chicago Vegetarian Society, explains that vegetarians don't have special menus for holidays.

Unexpected Guests
"If someone came to visit unexpectedly," Mrs. Mantel said, "I would feed them cheese, fresh fruits, crackers and uncooked nuts."

Mrs. Mantel, a vegetarian for 16 years, plans a menu of scrambled eggs and salad, asparagus and rutabagas for the holiday.

away from five major steps in the plan at the Tuesday session after months of entrenched and vocal opposition from existing agencies.

It scrapped a proposal to combine the conservation and water pollution control efforts into a department of natural resources and decided perhaps a coordinating committee should be created to oversee the two present departments.

It indicated more study should be given to the idea of leaving health and welfare in separate departments at present. The trend seemed to foreshadow the obituary of the original move to create a single department of health, welfare and veterans affairs.

Stays Independent

It dismissed the present attempt to create a department of commerce, decided to leave the Public Service Commission as an independent agency, and favored simply pairing banking and savings and loans in a single department as they once were.

It discarded a suggestion for a department of public safety, said conservation could keep its wardens and left state highway troopers connected to the motor vehicle functions.

It hinted that regulatory boards, such as the Wisconsin Employment Relations Board, might be left independent also. "There is going to be a compromise — no question about it," said Kelleit, but he held out hope that the efforts still were "coming closer to jelling into a bill" than before.

Reshuffling Likely

With no attempt made to overhaul the universities or public instruction, which account for well over half of the spending in the state budget, the reorganization now appears likely to be limited to a reshuffling of a few small agencies.

The major change left in the omnibus package at present is the merger of Highway and Motor Vehicle Departments into a new department of transportation.

However, the package does pare the number of separate state agencies from 85 to about 16 major areas under the realignment of various functions. The 16 areas are administration, revenue, agriculture, transportation, higher education, public instruction, health, conservation, resource development, industrial relations. Public Service Commission, investment board, veterans affairs and financial institutions.

South Vietnamese Desertions Decline

Tougher Penalties Drop Total From 7,500 to 4,000 a Month

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

SAIGON (AP) — Desertions from South Viet Nam's regular military forces have dropped sharply under the threat of stiff new penalties, U.S. sources said today.

According to figures made available to the Associated Press, the number of deserters decreased from about 7,500 last March to some 4,000 in September.

The Saigon government published a decree last April that deserters no longer would be treated leniently. A follow-up order last summer made tough penalties effective Oct. 1.

A persistent desertion problem in the South Vietnamese armed forces has been a cause of considerable concern to U.S. leaders, and has tended to cast doubt on the Vietnamese will to fight their own battle.

Back to Duty

Desertions zoomed in 1965 after the South Vietnamese government issued an order which had the effect of sending deserters back to duty rather than jailing them.

This did away with an important deterrent to desertion, in the opinion of U.S. military officials.

Why was this done? American authorities say it was because South Vietnamese jails were becoming overcrowded.

In 1965, there were 113,000 desertions from the various branches of the Vietnamese military — the regular, regional and popular forces. This compared with 73,000 in 1964.

The new decrees restore punishment for desertion and in some ways make that punishment more stringent.

Battlefield Laborers

Convicted deserters are not imprisoned, but are made "battlefield laborers" for a minimum of five years on their first offense.

They are given all the dirty coolie-type tasks. They are kept under close guard, their heads are shaved and they are clad in castoff clothing.

Some of these "battlefield laborers" are starting to appear where the Vietnamese troops can see them, and officials believe this will have a big impact.

For a second desertion offense, a soldier may get five more years at hard labor. A third offense could place him before a firing squad.

A new provision makes civilians liable to five years as battlefield laborers if convicted on charges of aiding and abetting desertions. There have been at least three such convictions.

The definition of a deserter, once complicated, has been simplified and toughened to mean any South Vietnamese serviceman who is absent without leave for more than 15 days.

Officials said some 7,500 Vietnamese regulars turned themselves in and escaped punishment as deserters during the grace period before the new measures went into force.

Another 7,500 draft dodgers were scooped up by police. Draft dodgers are put into uniform when caught. There are no other penalties.

liament that elects the chancellor.

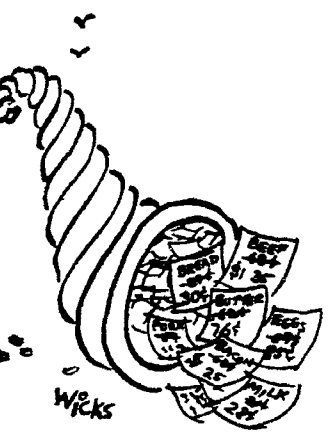

Klaus Schutz, West Berlin representative in Bonn, promised in a speech to businessmen Tuesday that voting rights for the West Berliners could not damage the rights of the United States, Britain and France in the city. The votes could help Social Democrat Mayor Willy Brandt to become chancellor.

'Not Gratifying'

Ex-Defense Minister Franz Joseph Strauss, who holds a key position in the crisis, urged in an interview that the Allies declare Berlin a state of the West German Federal Republic. Their insistence on refusing the Berlin vote was "not gratifying," he said.

Strauss helped make ex-Nazi Kurt Georg Kiesinger the candidate of his Christian Democratic party to succeed Erhard. Votes by the Berliners would not help Kiesinger, but the plea conformed to the national line Strauss took in the recent Bavarian election. There have been some reports that Strauss would be glad to have his party go into the opposition for a while, after which he himself could emerge as its candidate for chancellor.

Chaos Possible If President Is Incapacitated

31 States Approve Amendment About Disability Procedure

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once more the country escaped in President Johnson's illness — as in the illnesses of other presidents — the kind of rumpus which could occur because the Constitution is vague on what happens when a president is too disabled to do his job.

When Johnson underwent two minor operations recently, he was under an anesthetic about one hour and a half. In about four hours he was whipping back into shape. Before he went to the operating room he and Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey had an agreement that if Johnson was too disabled to carry out his job, Humphrey would have stepped in.

At best, it was only an informal arrangement, the same as Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy had with their vice presidents. There have been times in American history when presidents were terribly disabled but there was no arrangement for a vice president to take over.

Crisis Possible

The lack of a disability agreement spelled out by law could lead to a national crisis.

For example: What if there was a dispute between the president and his vice president over whether the president, after the vice president had stepped in for him, was still too disabled to carry out his duties? In short, what would happen if a vice president refused to stop acting as president?

Perhaps by the end of March, 1967, this problem will have been eliminated. By then three-fourths of the states — 38 out of 50 — are expected to have approved the proposed 25th amendment to the Constitution which Congress okayed July 6, 1965. So far 31 states have approved.

Present Arrangement

The Johnson-Humphrey arrangements provided that while Johnson was undergoing and recovering from surgery Humphrey, if necessary, would carry out the presidential duties until Johnson had recovered.

As of now the Constitution simply says this on presidential disability and succession: In case of presidential inability, the vice president will carry out the president's job; and Congress can provide by law for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability of president and vice president and decide who takes over as president.

Several times by law Congress has provided for the order of succession — among top government officials — to the presidency if the president dies and there is no vice president. But, while eight vice presidents were alive to take over a presidency vacated by death, seven other times vice presidents died in office. And one vice president resigned.

Present Confusion

The proposed 25th amendment tries to prevent the nightmare which would follow if once a disabled president let his vice president take over but then later decided he had recovered enough to take back his job but the vice president, and perhaps others, decided he was still too disabled to function.

The proposed amendment lays down these rules:

If the president notifies Congress he is unable to carry out his duties, the vice president will take over, provided he and Congress he has recovered.

If the president is too disabled to fill his job or to tell Congress so or is too disabled to even know he is, the vice president will take over, provided he and a majority of the principal officers of the executive branch tell Congress so.

Once the president thinks he has recovered enough to take back his job, he will notify Congress. If then the vice president and a majority of those other executive officers think differently, Congress will decide.

Division in the Legislature

There are those students of political affairs who insist that the most reliable gauge of the political division within a state on a long-range basis is the composition of the state legislature, and especially the house that is required to submit to the scrutiny of the electorate at frequent intervals.

Under Wisconsin law, that barometer is the state assembly of 100 members, each of whom must stand for election at intervals of two years. Elections of state-wide officers, such as the governor, may turn upon individual appeals and performance, campaign skills and many other factors. But slates of 100 candidates of each party for seats in the assembly tend to reflect the fundamental partisan complexion of the voters of the state as a whole.

By that test, the competition of the parties in Wisconsin this year was a good deal closer than is indicated by the vote for governor, or for representatives in the Congress, as examples.

Aside from the possibility of recounts in a few districts where the reported margins of victory for legislators were extremely narrow, the Republicans will have 53 members of the 1967 Wisconsin assembly, and the Democrats will hold 47 seats. That is a comparatively narrow margin. As Madison correspondents have already noted, one of the first responsibilities of the floor quarterbacks of the majority party next winter will be to guarantee the attendance of all of their members on crucial roll calls.

A couple of absentees or abstentions could be embarrassing, assuming the watchfulness of the Democratic minority leadership.

The news columns have related that some of the senior members of the Republicans assembly caucus are already scouting for votes to support their claims to leadership positions, including the coveted speakership. The speaker in the legislature is of considerably greater consequence than many citizens are normally aware. His duty is not only the mechanical one of presiding over house deliberations and assuring order and dignity in the proceedings. In a very real sense he is the leader of the majority party of the house and responsible for its conduct and its efficiency through his absolute power over the appointment of the principal standing committees, and the selection of their chairmen. To the degree that the speaker recruits the best and ablest men for the principal committee chairmanships, within the practical political requirements of his own election to the chair, the assembly functions successfully or poorly.

As it happens, the assembly majority party has an abundance of able, tested and ambitious young men available for the selection. Among them are Harold Clemens of Waukesha County, Harold Froehlich of Appleton and David Martin of Neenah, although we do not mean such a listing to be exclusive. There is speculation elsewhere about the rôle likely to be played by Assemblyman Alfonsi in the assembly command for the new term. A man of rich experience and ample talent, Mr. Alfonsi's position is blurred unfortunately by the fact that his conviction on a charge of misconduct remains to be ruled upon finally by the supreme court. Under the circumstances, it does not seem likely to us that he will be considered. To ask his colleagues to wait for the outcome of his appeal would be asking for a considerable delay in the organization plans of his party.

The Right Wing in Germany

The right wing National Democratic Party in West Germany picked up some seats in the state parliament after voting in Bavaria on Sunday. But it is still difficult to determine whether the party is really neo-Nazi or whether the small percentage of seats it now holds are of any great importance.

Actually the NDP will have only 15 seats in the Bavaria legislature after it won some 7.4 per cent of the ballots cast. It holds a slightly larger percentage in the Hesse legislature. Although this is an increase in both states, the percentages are not yet enough to enable the NDP to be represented in the parliament of West Germany.

The leadership of the NDP strongly protests the neo-Nazi label and says that the party is merely a conservative one. Actually former Nazi ties are probably no longer a barrier to political progress. The candidate for chancellor of the Christian Democrats, West Germany's strongest party, is a former Nazi. As serious observers and tongue in cheek songs have pointed out, dedicated Nazis have been hard to find in Germany since the end of World War II. Even the concentration camp commanders have insisted that they were merely obeying orders from on high in carrying out their appalling duties.

But whether or not there is some hypocrisy in denying the Nazi ideology, so far the NDP has not demonstrated pro-Nazi emotions. The day before elections, a NDP rally scheduled for an opera house in Munich was banned by the city government. The party members quietly went home with no riots, no violence, not even a torch burned. Of course this acquiescence may be part of a plan to lull the opposition into relaxing its concern. But certainly it was not the way Nazis used to act at any time in their history.

The current political situation in West Germany is also a major reason why the NDP picked up some votes. Chancellor Erhard has resigned and there is confusion over what sort of a coalition can be put together to pick his successor. The Christian Democrats do not have enough power to stand alone and in fact have not for several years. But the Christian Democrats are further hampered by splits within the party. Compromise candidates who will soothe the intra-party friction may not find support for inter-party agreement. Such lack of control obviously plays into the hands of the extremist groups. It even did in Wisconsin a couple of years ago when George Wallace picked up an amazing 25 per cent of the Wisconsin primary vote but his backing dissolved when the real election came along.

At this time we should be far more concerned over the failure of West German leaders to solve their political crisis at the highest level of government than over the gains of the NDP or even whether it really does harken back to Nazi ideas and ideals. If there are significant gains of the latter, they will come through the failures of the former.

Guatemala's Problems

The Alliance for Progress, conceived by President Kennedy in an effort to encourage Latin American countries to help themselves, specifies that recipient countries must show sincere efforts to make social and economic reforms and put up some funds themselves to qualify for those from the United States. But progress is a slow matter in nations where there has been little grass roots concern by the very wealthy for the very destitute.

A moderate president in Guatemala, Julio Cesar Mendez Montenegro, has been attacked by both Communist guerrillas and right wing groups ever since he took office in July. Partly to soothe right wing army units, he sent troops into several provinces to do battle with the Red-led guerrillas. But although his party controls the legislature, it appears doubtful now that tax reforms will make much headway. Since Guatemala desperately needs money for highway, water and housing projects, the situation is serious.

At present in Guatemala there is a property tax of only $3 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. Efforts to raise this have been combatted by property owners as Communistic especially since the proposed law would have progressive increases and therefore hit the big property owners the hardest. Currently a Guatemalan farmer with up to $15,000 in gross income is exempt from even filing an income tax return. The proposal to lower the figure to $5,000 is meeting strenuous objections.

The aristocrat and peasant way of life has existed in many Latin American countries since Europeans first began to settle the continent. Even the very real threat of Communist rebellion has not convinced a lot of the haves in Latin America that they have a greater responsibility toward their own poor than a few pesos in the poor box.

President Mendez' problem is to soothe the wealthy while not adding more adherents to the Communist cause. So far his offer of amnesty to the guerrillas has been scornfully refused but he has been almost as seriously repulsed by right wing elements as well.

Viet Cong Delegation in Prague Reveals Their Thinking on War

BY JOSEPH KRAFT

PRAGUE — Fiftly, perhaps, this half-lit Gothic City, the setting and inspiration for Kafka's weird novel "The Castle," is one of the few places where it is possible to meet the other side in the Vietnamese war. The National Liberation Front, or Viet Cong, maintains a delegation here under the leadership of a veteran guerrilla fighter, Tram Lam.

In the past few days I have been able to talk at length to one of the representatives of the Front. What follows is my summary of the main views expressed by the Front in a conversation that rambled several hours.

for independence for more than a quarter of a century. After we have shed so much blood and lost so many lives, it is not easy to accept the kind of capitulation the Americans are now offering.

We know that America is a great country and a rich country. But its power is not unlimited. We know what it has already taken to fight against 14,000,000 people in a tiny piece of land. It has taken one-third of the American combat divisions, one-half of the American air strength, one-third of the American fleet.

Despite that effort, the Americans have not yet destroyed a single one of our companies, not one company totally destroyed. We know that the Americans have responsibilities here in Europe and in Latin America. We think that, if it has already taken them so much to accomplish so little, in the end of our struggle will not be in vain.

ON ESCALATION: If it has taken so much American power to fight a tiny country with such small results, it does not make sense to fight 17,000,000 more people from North Viet Nam in a still larger area.

ON THE AMERICAN ELECTIONS: It was a complicated affair, very difficult to follow. Despite various demonstrations and manifestations, the American people apparently let President Johnson do what he wants to do in Viet Nam.

ON WHY THE LIBERATION FRONT HAS NOT FORMED A PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT: We were a front representing many segments of the population of South Viet Nam. But there remain some elements outside the Front. If we formed a government we might exclude those people. We think that, if we keep our ranks open, we can still win over whole cities and even units of the South Vietnamese army.

ON REUNIFICATION WITH THE NORTH: By reason of language, culture and the economy, Viet Nam is one. But we recognize as a reality the Geneva partition and the fact of 12 years of separate history.

We are fighting for an independent South Viet Nam, with its own constitution, its own elections and its own government. Later, that government might, step by step and stage by stage, work toward unification with North Viet Nam.

ON PROSPECTS FOR NEGOTIATIONS: We do not think the time is right for negotiations for two reasons. One is the the Americans keep intensifying the war by sending in more troops, by raising the military budget and by increasing draft calls. The other is that the Americans have not recognized the Liberation Front.

ON THE POSSIBILITY OF NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND NORTH VIET NAM: The North cannot negotiate for the South. Hanoi is not the voice of the South. The Front is that voice.

No doubt large elements of false information and deliberate distortion run through the views expressed by the Front. But the untruths believed by the Front are not unimportant. And even propaganda represents what people want to have believed about themselves, which means what they are themselves prone to believe.

At any rate, two qualities in the statements by the Front strike me as being especially notable. For one thing, there is immense confidence — even pride — in the capacity to absorb punishment and win out in the end.

For another, the Front does not draw its confidence, as the President and secretary of state seem pleased to believe, from the American critics of American policy. On the contrary, the confidence of the other side is based on a detailed analysis of benefits and costs. The conclusion of the Front is that, given the small American stake in Viet Nam and the huge American stake in the rest of the world, the commitment made to Viet Nam by the President and the secretary of state is too lopsided to be sustained indefinitely.

Wisconsin Report

District Attorney Who Prosecuted Alfonsi Is Defeated in Election

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — Among the sidelights in the recent elections that have provoked endless comment in both partisan camps was the electoral reaction to the first prosecution of members of the Wisconsin Legislature for alleged misconduct in the memory of politicians now living.

Wyngaard

Interpreting the individual district results of particular elections is a hazardous enterprise, at best, but it appears fair to speculate that the voters of Dane County were not especially responsive to the efforts of their county prosecutor in the indictment of two prominent members of the Wisconsin Assembly last summer. Moreover, the decisive re-election of the two prominent defendants in their own legislative jurisdictions suggests that their standing in their communities has not been lessened by the incident which was one of the most highly publicized political developments of the year and a matter of obvious embarrassment to the Republicans in the legislative branch.

Dane County Dist. Atty. Michael Torphy called for the grand jury inquiry into alleged law violations in connection with legislation, persuaded it that there was enough evidence to warrant indictments, and then successfully prosecuted Assemblyman Paul Alfonsi, the Republican minority leader in the Assembly and perhaps the best known member of that house.

HUTNIK CASE DISMISSED
Torphy then failed in the prosecution of Assemblyman Willis Hutnik, another of the best known politicians of upper Wisconsin, when the trial was transferred to Hutnik's Rusk County and the case was dismissed by a trial judge assigned to preside.

Altogether, the two cases brought Torphy more attention in his home county, and caused more excitement in Wisconsin politics, than any brought by a Dane County prosecutor in many years. Yet, the district attorney was decisively defeated.

There were many factors involved in the upset election in Madison and environs, including the fact that the usually defeatist Dane County Republican organization fielded an unusually attractive slate of county office aspirants this year. Yet, to many minds that is not enough to explain why the residents of his county, after aggressive attack on legislative morality, should make him the only man on his slate to be rejected.

That the voters most immediately concerned, and perhaps most immediately informed, about these dramatic affairs were not deeply impressed is suggested even more obviously by the reaction of the legislators' constituents, especially those who sent Alfonsi to Madison as their representative for many terms. His vote was better than in some other years, and he would be less than human if he regarded it as other than a vindication of his service among his neighbors as he anxiously awaits the Supreme Court decision on his appeal from his conviction in the lower court on a bribery charge.

LEADERSHIP UNCERTAIN
The twilight zone which Alfonsi now occupies — he cannot take his seat unless the Supreme Court reverses his conviction — has brought some uncertainty to the new Republican majority looking forward to organizing the Assembly.

As it now appears, the new house GOP majority will hold an early caucus in Madison to resolve the issue of the election of a new speaker. Several apt candidates have made themselves known, and among them the most likely victor appears to be veteran Harold Clemens of rural Waukesha County.

The more bothersome question is the selection of a floor-leader, which in some respects is the more challenging leadership office and for which Alfonsi is superbly equipped by experience, training and native skills. Except for his legal troubles, there would be no doubt about his choice for that place with the seating of the Republican majority of the new house. Yet, because he cannot qualify as a member until he wins in the courts on his appeal, the decision will probably be delayed.

Aside from Alfonsi's qualities of experience and skill, moreover, his friends will be reluctant to pass him over until he has exhausted the full appeal course in the courts which is his right under the law. But because the court may not render a final judgment for some weeks, the leadership question may not be resolved until the Assembly meets, and possibly later.

Science Solves All Except Mail Service

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Some weeks ago, the Chicago Post Office, which handles a heavier volume of mail than any other city in the U. S., experienced the most monumental foul-up in its history. Although emergency measures are taken, deliveries of everything but first-class mail are still shockingly slow.

Harris

This abysmal condition recalled something I'd read a few years ago, by William L. Shirer, the noted foreign correspondent, author of "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich," and a man who has lived all over the world for the last four decades.

According to this veteran traveler, "the mail service offered us citizens of this most technologically advanced nation in the world must be the worst on the face of the globe."

Shirer has lived and worked in many primitive, underdeveloped countries throughout the world. But, he went on to say, "in not a single one of them was the postal service so slow or slovenly as in this country, which has led the world into the jet-space age."

He cited a couple of appalling examples: a letter postmarked Norwalk, Conn. on Saturday, Jan. 7, reached him at 10:30 a.m. on Jan. 10 in

New York City, less than 60 miles away. Another, mailed from an office less than one mile from his home at noon on Jan. 9 reached him Jan. 11.

Letters to New York from Boston and Washington take two full days "if you are lucky." He pointed out that mail by sailing ship or pony express from those two cities 150 years ago took hardly any more time.

Shirer then concluded his broadside by saying that "Even in Kabul, Afghanistan, when I was there 30 years ago, the postal service was far superior to that in New York City today ... It puzzles. It raises questions about our whizbang society."

It is dismally ironic that while we are preening ourselves about our shots in space — the "conquest" of space, I believe, the current cliché — we can't seem to solve a space problem much closer to home. And postal rates keep going up — which might be tolerable, if the service rose along with the cost. But, if anything, it gets worse.

It is a melancholy contradiction in terms that an American can now circle the globe in little more than an hour, while the average speed of a mail truck on a city street is now less than it took a horse and wagon at the turn of the century.

You may remember, not long ago, an experiment in which it took a taxicab 45 minutes to cross mid-town Manhattan, which horses easily used to traverse in a half-hour or less. Neither wind nor rain may stop these couriers — but traffic can in the highly-touted "space age."

Executive-Type Look to Help Gov. Romney

Many Give Support Without Knowing Political Opinions

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. George Romney of Michigan has good reason to feel a little cocky, at least right now. He has a lot going for him. At 58 he is trim, square-jawed, with an undaunted gaze.

This is the strong, executive-type look. And he was a good executive when he was head of American Motors. He switched to politics and this month was elected to his third term as governor.

A recent public opinion poll, which showed him more highly regarded than President Johnson, said voters considered him a man of higher character, with compelling moral overtones.

He has refused so far to say whether he will seek the Republican presidential candidacy in 1968 although at the moment he seems to be in front of the field of likely prospects.

Long Road
Yet, he has a long way to go before he can get the nomination and an even longer one before he can ever win the White House.

For one thing, he will have to do a lot of explaining on where he stands on national issues. Outside of Michigan, most people who admire him probably are admiring Romney as a person without much knowledge of what he stands for.

The reason is that he hasn't said much, or has been very vague, on problems outside his state. One example is the war in Viet Nam. On this subject he has wiggled and wobbled and in one memorable news conference made hash of it.

Besides this, he is going to have a job reconciling Goldwater Republicans and inducing them to support him — if he wants to run for president — after his attitude toward Sen. Barry Goldwater in the 1964 campaign.

Goldwater Stand
He didn't endorse the Arizona. And recently Goldwater, while not closing the door on the governor, said Romney has a "lot of homework to do with party leaders" to atone for failing to endorse him.

It's possible, if Romney moves into the national scene, that he will show a tendency to shoot from the hip. He did a bit of that over the weekend.

He and New York's re-elected Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller arranged to meet at Dorado, Puerto Rico. Before Romney arrived Rockefeller, who has taken himself out of presidential consideration but vividly remembers the split condition of the GOP in 1964, tried to look ahead to see what it needed to get solidified for 1968.

Not 'Consensus'
He suggested Republican governors reach a consensus — Johnson's favorite word — on moving away from the dogmatic ideology that characterized the 1964 campaign.

Immediately after arriving, and before seeing Rockefeller, Romney attacked Rockefeller's "consensus" proposal. He said, "That's Rockefeller's word. I associate it with someone (undoubtedly Johnson) who has not fared so well with consensus. I think we need leadership."

After talking with Rockefeller, Romney endorsed Rockefeller's "consensus" in principle. He said the difference between them was more apparent than real.

Romney, like so many other governors, talks about the need for more independence by the states. At the same time he wants the federal government to hand back to the states for their needs, but without strings, income tax money.

Suggest Less Dictation To Trucking Operators

Chairman of PSC Tells Governor Control By State Government May be Excessive

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — State government control of truck transportation within Wisconsin may be excessive and in some instances, unnecessary, Gov. Warren P. Knowles has been told by the head of the state transportation regulation agency.

The comment was made by Arthur Padrutt, chairman of the Public Service Commission (PSC) during a hearing on the

More Newspapers Will be Needed in Future, Publisher Says

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The changing patterns of American communities will require more newspapers and a wider variety of them in the future, a nationally known publisher said Tuesday night.

Bernard Kilgore of New York, board chairman of Dow Jones & Co., publisher of the Wall Street Journal, spoke at a meeting of the Milwaukee chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic society.

Kilgore said people are "reclustering around population centers," forming different types of communities with varied interests.

He said the newspapers will include the metropolitan newspaper, an improved version of the metropolitan newspaper and specialized publications, both dailies and weeklies.

commission's budget request when the governor asked about possible legislative activity in the field of transportation in the 1967 legislature.

Padrutt replied that there is room for some "de-regulation," in the field of trucking transportation, and offered his view that state regulation of some of the smaller for-hire operators, and those in agriculture, resulted from historical and legislative "accidents" and serve no useful purpose.

Padrutt said there is enough competition to control rates in such operations as the transportation of building materials in dump trucks, the hauling of fluid milk from the farm to market and the return of farm supplies to the producer, the hauling of farm livestock and the delivery of forest raw materials from the woods to the mills.

PSC Supervises
Such transportation activity involves thousands of operators, each of whom is franchised and supervised by the PSC.

The commission chairman told Knowles the commission does not feel it is obligated to sponsor such legislation. An earlier effort in the legislature to end state control of for-hire carriers disclosed that operators who now hold certificates are reluctant to surrender them and risk open competition. Gov. Knowles made no direct comment.

State Asks for Cost Estimate Of Rail Signals

PSC Head Says Warnings Would Cost $50 Million

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — To protect all of the railroad crossings in the state with warning signals would probably involve a cost of $50 million, according to the head of the Wisconsin Public Service Commission.

Arthur Padrutt made the estimate in response to an inquiry from the state executive department, which has shown an interest in accelerating the railroad crossing signal program as a contribution to a strengthened highway safety program within the state.

The commission for many years has had jurisdiction over crossing signals, and yearly orders such installations within the limits of the state's appropriation for the purpose. Under the present law, the state Highway Commission can be directed to pay up to 70 per cent of such costs, with the balance assessed against the railroad company involved.

Such protective devices have thus far been installed on about a quarter of the 6,500 railroad crossings in the state. The railroads have indicated that they will probably ask the next legislature to boost the state share of such costs to 90 per cent.

Padrutt said the commission is occasionally criticized for the lack of warning devices at some crossings, but noted also that the record shows that the number of deaths in the state at the majority of unprotected crossings is below that of the intersections on the more heavily traveled routes which already have such protective installations.

Courses in Touristry At State Universities Soon to be Discussed

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — A state-wide conference to be summoned soon will review a proposal that the state's institutions of higher learning provide courses of study designed to train students for service in the big and growing Wisconsin tourism industry.

Such proposal has been put before the Board of Regents of State Colleges by Regent David Bennett of Portage. University of Wisconsin officials have also expressed interest in the idea.

Educators and tourist industry leaders will be invited to the conference for a discussion of the proposal and the selection of a campus for the provision of such training.

Smithsonian Gives Hand to Museums

Program Keyed to Far-Reaching, Immediate Benefits of Institutions

By J.W. DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution, a treasure house of relics, is embarked on a new venture which is intended to have impact on cities and small towns throughout the nation.

The program is keyed to museums and how they can pay off in the far-reaching benefits of stimulating educational growth and the immediate benefits of producing income for towns and cities.

Frank A. Taylor, director of the United States National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution, says the Smithsonian is intensifying cooperation with more than 5,000 existing museums, and also is engaged in training curators and other museum workers.

The 89th Congress passed, and President Johnson signed, legislation providing for a million-dollar, four-year start on the program. The underlying aims are to help improve present museums and to encourage communities which do not have them, to start now on setting them up.

Nation's Attic

The Smithsonian, top Washington attraction for tourists and scholars, is a center of study that in recent years has changed from being known as "the nation's attic" to the nation's showplace.

More than 10 million visitors pass through the Smithsonian each year.

Tourists can be drawn to small museums, too, Taylor said.

"Tourism is a big economic boon to any community and museums have frequently helped the economy of their areas far beyond any relationship to the modest support given them," he says.

Taylor cites, for example, Cooperstown, N.Y., home of the baseball Hall of Fame, the Farmers Museum and the Fenimore House.

"On a summer afternoon in Cooperstown," he says, "tour-

Action Started Against State Polluters

MADISON (AP)—Legal action has been started by the attorney general's office against nine municipalities and two individuals as part of a stepped up campaign against alleged polluters of Wisconsin's waterways.

The actions were taken after John Potter, chairman of the Resource Development Board, vowed immediate action against those who have been slow in meeting Wisconsin's cleanup orders.

Asst. Atty. Gen. James McDermott listed the communities Tuesday as the villages of Stratford, Lena, Niagara, Hustisford, and Brandon, and towns of Wabeno and Laona, and the cities of Colby and Oconto.

He said the individuals were Richard Hunsader, operator of the Cloverdale Cheese Co., of Dorchester and Emil Mech Sr., operator of Diamond Dairy of rural Edgar.

The complaints in each case, McDermott said, sought to force action on the improvement of sewage treatment facilities which allegedly are not now preventing pollution.

ists are so thick you can't find a place to park."

He also cited Tidewater Virginia where "the whole town of Williamsburg is a museum; where the whole complex of Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown attracts great hordes of people."

"Twice in recent weeks, I have heard it said that businesses seeking locations for new plants are quite concerned about the cultural climate," Taylor says.

"It was said that firms have difficulty in recruiting or keeping good men, especially young executives, in places that lack cultural resources," he said.

"When locating new plants they look at the schools and the museums, as well as other cultural and recreational opportunities in the places seeking their new factory or office building."

Reality Offered
As for helping education, Taylor says, "the museum, no matter how small, offers reality, which is eagerly sought by young, active-minded people."

The textbook, radio and television are saturating the student with second-hand interpretations and someone else's impressions. He must be given the opportunity to form his own impressions of reality. These are the words of educators."

A survey of teachers in 20 states showed they were vitally interested in how to obtain objects for their schoolroom use, he says.

"They want access to everyday objects—no great objects—a tool, utensil, a churn, or anything original and authentic. They said these objects had an almost magic effect upon children."

For example, he says, a beaver borrowed from a museum might help explain the experiences of the mountain men and trappers of the country's early days, just as pewter dish or simple stool might help make clear the picture of life in a pioneer cabin.

Desire, Curiosity
Taylor said educators do not know what creates the will to learn, although they know how essential is the desire to know, and the curiosity to inquire.

"I am convinced," he said, "that many times the spark is struck in the museum and this may be the most important contribution of the work: to stimulate the desire to know more about the past and more about the child's own place in the world."

The legislation behind the new Smithsonian cooperative program was introduced by Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and Rep. Frank T. Bow, R-Ohio, both members of the Smithsonian Board of Regents.

The legislation permits the support of students enrolled in schools and colleges in taking cooperative courses in museums and makes possible internships for people working in museums who may require work training in well-equipped and well-staffed museums.

Instruct Young
"Skilled museum curators would instruct and share their skills with young people making careers of museum work," Taylor says.

"Research and the development of museum techniques in the preservation of museum objects, in administration, and in the design and production of educational exhibits would be supported under the act."

Federal funds will not be available for direct financial aid to museums. As Taylor says, it is a modest program. Approximately 15 fellowships or internships for museum technicians in science, history, or art will be provided in 1967-68.

Social Security Base May be Hiked to $7,800

BY SYLVIA PORTER

If you now have taxable earnings of more than $6,600 a year, it is a near certainty that your Social Security tax bill soon will be boosted. This would be above and beyond the increases you will have to pay 1967's already scheduled Social Security tax increases, the maximum you might have to pay would jump from next year's $290.40 to $343.20. If you're a self-employed individual, the maximum would jump from next year's $422.40 to $499.20. These are hefty increases, to say the least, and they would, of course, have to be matched by employers the nation over.

A key argument for a wage base boost is that the wage base simply has not kept pace with the overall advances in our earnings. Had the wage base kept up with the rise in earnings since 1935 — when it was first set at $3,000 — the base would be $15,000 today. In 1963, 98 per cent of the nation's workers paid Social Security taxes on all their earnings; today only 78 per cent of us have all our earnings covered.

The second argument is that the Social Security tax burden now falls disproportionately on the lower-income individual. A man with taxable earnings of $1,000 a year today pays a full 4.2 per cent of this amount. But a man earning $100,000 pays less than .003 per cent of his total earnings.

A third argument is that contributions based on a higher earnings base today would mean proportionately higher benefit levels later when you retire. A fundamental principle of our Social Security System has always been to relate benefits to actual earnings. Since a rise in the wage base appears inevitable, the third argument may be some comfort to you.

How To Pay
How would we pay for an estimated $3.3 billion cost of benefit boosts and liberalizations?

As much as $1.65 billion could be financed from surpluses due to our increased contributions based on increased earnings, revised population estimates, higher interest rates being earned by the Social Security trust funds, etc.

The balance could come either from a new Social Security tax boost or from a hike in today's $6,000 "wage base" upon which your maximum contributions and your future benefits are figured, or, most likely, from a combination. A tax boost, of course, would hit all 80,000,000 of today's contributors to the system. But a wage-base boost would hit only the 16,000,000 of us now earning more than $6,600 a year.

Assuming you are in the over-$6,600 earnings range, how would a wage-base hike affect you?

You will pay a total of $277.20 in Social Security taxes this year, or $405.90 if you are self-employed. Starting Jan. 1, you will pay a maximum of $290.40, or $422.20 if you are self-employed.

But let's say that the wage base is hiked next year from $6,600 to $7,800, the "magic" figure now being debated in Washington. Taking into account

Vaccine Prevents Measles

No longer is it necessary for your child to have measles. All that's needed is immunization against this disease that once was taken for granted as one of the hazards of growing up. A veteran medical expert on communicable disease said this fall that measles could be eradicated in the United States in a relatively short time if all young children were immunized. Already more than 12 million American children have been immunized against measles since a vaccine was licensed in 1963, and the disease has dropped to a mere fraction of its once high incidence. Doctors have long known that measles is sometimes a much more serious disease than many parents realized. True, most children recover from measles in a short time and with no ill effects. However, in recent years deaths attributed to measles have averaged more than 400 per year, and other non-fatal effects have caused serious health problems for many more children. Even though deaths and serious after effects are not particularly common among children who get measles, it isn't wise to take a chance. And it isn't necessary to take a chance. The American Academy of Pediatrics, the professional society of the physicians who specialize in health problems of children, recommends that the measles vaccine be given at the age of about 12 months. If your infant is routinely under the care of a physician, the chances are he will give measles vaccine at the proper time. But if your child is past the age of 12 months and hasn't yet been immunized against measles, don't delay. Call your physician and ask his advice about measles shots. There are several different types of measles vaccine available. Your doctor will select the vaccine that will be best for your child.

Parisian Fashion Spring Bursting With Bright Color

By LUCIE NOEL
PARIS (AP) — Winter hasn't begun, but Paris ready-to-wear designers have already shown spring collections of lovely sunshine colors, dazzling new prints and a floating, mobile silhouette with hemlines two to three inches above the knees. All 25 of the designers, who have just held their shows, are stressing fluidity. Their fullness swirls, their pleats twirl, and their shifts softly skim the figure. Cut-in necklines, bare shoulders, and unexpected cutouts are pretty, carefully detailed and well made. Colors are all the sunshine shades, orange in several tones, lemons from bitter to the ripest, soft Bengal rose and hot pink, all the lavenders, pansy mauves and bluebell, several clear reds, and raw salad green — all shown alone or daringly mixed. The ready-to-wear business is growing and spreading. Yves Saint-Laurent is opening new boutiques all over the world and Pierre Cardin plans to do likewise for his line of men's wear. Marie Carine, who manufactures for Heim, Lanvin, Desse, Scherrer and Laroche, and L. Mendes, who produces for Patou, de Rauch, Venet, Castillo and Saint-Laurent Coats, feed both home and international markets. Says Didier Grumbach, heir to the Mendes firm: "We service the couturier-designers. Next year we will produce more and may drop our prices 20 per cent. As manufacturers we have been forced to give up our own label and dedicate ourselves to our customers. Not Enough. "No manufacturer can survive if he represents only a single French couturier. For this reason all United States-pairs tieups peter out after about three years. Representing five big-name couturiers, we sell to the United States and Canada, and made a turnover of $600,000 last year on them alone." Women born in the 1920s have not had much attention from designers lately. Everything has been geared to teens and sub-teens, with miniskirts and yee-yee styles leading. Great Mobs. One manufacturer, Star, called on a movie star of the 1920 vintage, Michele Morgan. She edited a line for the woman of 30 and up. When displayed at the annual Semaine de la Boutique — Week of the Ready-Made Shop — salon, the stand was mobbed. In five days, orders jumped to $3 million with middle-aged women fighting to look and buy. The top group of manufacturers insist on perfection. Although the goods are "manufactured," much of the fine sewing is done in convents. Mendes recently staged a special show for nuns and little sisters, all wide-eyed to see the finished product parading on the runway.

Newlyweds Honeymoon In East

NEENAH — Wedding vows were exchanged by Miss Nana Margaret Oakley and Anthony J. Rutter in a 9 a.m. double ring ceremony Saturday at St. James Catholic Church, Madison. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Oakley, 510 West Shore Drive, Madison. Her husband, also a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, was employed in Madison as a research chemist. Choose Between King, Jack

Hundreds of times each year you will lead a suit in which your highest cards are the king and jack. Should you play the king or the jack? In some hands logic will give you the answer. Imagine that you are playing the North-South cards at four hearts. You are much too honest to peek at the East-West cards, so you don't know the location of the ace and queen of hearts.

You win the first trick in dummy with the ace of spades and lead a low trump. East plays low, and you much choose between the king and the jack. How do you choose the winning play?

You suspect that West has the ace of hearts because he has made the only defensive bid. Unfortunately, you cannot make the contract if West has the ace of hearts.

Mental Play

Go through the play in your mind on the assumption that West has the ace of hearts and that East has the queen. You play the jack of hearts, losing to the ace. Now West takes two high spades and leads another spade. East can over-ruff the dummy with his queen of hearts, and this defeats the contract.

Since you cannot make the contract by playing the jack of hearts, your only hope is to play the king. You do so, and luck is with you. Your king holds the trick, and the trump honors fall together when you return a trump.

Luck helps those who help themselves.

Daily Question

Partner opens with one diamond, and the next player passes. You hold: S 9, H A 3, D 7 6 5 4 2, C 8 5 4 3 2. What do you say?

Answer: Bid two diamonds. You count 4 points for the ace, 3 points for the singleton and 1 point for the doubleton, a total of 8 points in support of diamonds. This is enough for the raise. The hand is not quite freakish enough for a preemptive jump to four diamonds.

Teens, Drugs and The Law ... Part II

BY SYLVIE REICE

"I don't know what all the fuss is about," said a teen-ager recently. "Marijuana isn't even harmful like cigarettes. It can't hurt you at all, and it makes you feel so good."

Well, for one, as Dr. Stanley Einstein, Executive Director of the Institute for the Study of Addiction, points out, "Though marijuana is usually safe, it can affect some unstable personalities so that they become disoriented. This is a risk every drug-taker assumes." Also, it can never be predicted who will or who will not be affected harmfully. And furthermore, no one can predict which drug-experimentor will become hooked.

But all these risks aside, the fact remains that the possession and use of drugs in our country today is against the law. And little differentiation is made by the law as to whether a person is caught with marijuana, heroin, barbiturates, or amphetamines, all are illegal, and the possessor is guilty under the law. Just how serious this is may not be realized by most people, especially teen-agers!

Probably Expelled

If a teen is caught using drugs by the school authorities, they will generally call in "correctional people," such as the Bureau of Child Welfare. The school treats drugs as though they are a contagion that must be weeded out. In this effort, little distinction is made between drug-users and drug-addicts. Thus a teen caught even for the first time with drugs in his possession may very probably be thrown out of school!

Where are these expelled teens thrown to? Often — nowhere — into the streets to become true addicts. In our society today, drug-users are considered "morally" deficient, rather than "patients." Every one is so frightened of having a drug-user around, that the idea is to get rid of him. And once a young person gets "tagged" as an addict, he is in trouble for the rest of his life. (Sometimes lots of money and a good lawyer can intercede, but even this is iffy, depending on the authorities involved.) "Once you are tagged," says Dr. Einstein, "all stereotypes are heaped on you, and you are a humiliated outcast."

Not only is the teen drug-user hounded out of school, but the drug offense goes down on his school record.

If a teen is arrested for using drugs, he gets a police record. Once he has a police record, many jobs are no longer open to him, such as government and civil service jobs, and probably all jobs which require answering the question: "Have you ever been arrested?"

It's almost impossible to get into college with any record of drug use.

Some states will refuse a driving license to the person with a drug record.

The armed forces will not accept someone with a drug record into the service.

There is an alternative to arrest, and that is removal to a state hospital! But obviously the words "state hospital" look no better on a record than "drugs!"

Why would any clear-thinking teen risk his whole future just for kicks? Amphetamines, for instance, (dexedrine and diet pills) are, according to Dr. Einstein, extremely damaging. "Like L.S.D., they can take you over the borderline into psychosis, and you know, you can't always come back from there."

"Another 'suicidal game' teens play is mixing alcohol with pills! These 'set-ups,' as they are called, are barbiturates washed down with alcohol. The doctor points out that a single barbiturate with a single drink is equal to a massive dose — and a lot of barbiturates with a lot of alcohol in combination can be fatal. Again, just as no one can predict when a harmful experimenter with drugs will go over the borderline into addiction, so no one can tell when a set-up will be finally lethal! Add that to the legal consequences — is there any more that has to be said?

TEEN-TALIZERS:

On Friday nights Dallas teens go to the Studio Club, a posh teen night club. There's no couple dancing — line dances are the thing.

Sneakers and loafers are out in Darien, Conn. Girls now favor ghillies, mini desert boots and T-straps ... The big fall color with teens cross the country is grape.

What's it like to be the star of a TV series? Marlo Thomas, star of ABC-TV's "That Girl" says, "There is no time in this work for you to be tired or moody. You can't come on the set and 'slough it off.' The writers, director, producer and fellow actors are there to work..."

Home Accidents Caused Mainly By Falls, Fires

"Safe at home" means scoring a run and possibly winning the game to a baseball player.

The same phrase means something entirely different to the American family.

Every year we are greeted with a new set of statistics that tell us that we are by no means "safe at home" in the average household. In fact, the statistics show that home can be downright dangerous.

Accidents in the home caused 28,500 deaths in 1965, according to a journal published by the American Medical Association.

Each year about 25 million home accidents cause injuries serious enough to require medical attention or to restrict the activity of the victim a day or longer.

Falls and Fires

A host of physical factors are involved in home accidents, such as electrical and power equipment, inadequate lighting, glass doors, abandoned ice boxes, medicines, and many others. But by far the major causes of home accidents are two things — falls and fires.

Falls are the second most common cause of accidental death, next to highway accidents. Falls in and around the home each year cause injuries to nearly 7 million people and 12,000 deaths.

Minimize Hazards

Falls on stairs cause nearly 2,000 fatal injuries a year. Proper lighting and sturdy handrails on stairs are highly important to home safety. A good ladder to aid in reaching high places is much safer than standing on boxes or chairs. And the ladder should be firmly placed and braced at the foot. Spilled water or grease or improper waxing of floors cause falls. Loose rugs, scattered toys and trailing extension cords also are hazards. A light switch near the door of each room is a safety measure.

Most of these hazards can be eliminated or minimized by the head of the household.

Get your family together this evening and organize a tour of the house to check for possible "fall hazards." Then set about to correct these hazards as quickly as possible. Make your home as nearly accident-proof as possible.

Woman Asks Ann's Advice in Dealing With Unusual Problem

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a married woman with a most unusual problem. My parents (or the people I had always thought were my parents) died last year within months of each other. Yesterday the woman I thought was my aunt told me she is my real mother.

My "aunt" confessed she couldn't raise me because her sweetheart (my father) left town when he learned of her condition. She was kept out of sight in her married sister's house for several months. Relatives and friends were told she had left the country.

In the meantime the married sister kept plumping herself up with pillows, pretending to be pregnant. I was born at home and the attending midwife was sworn to secrecy. According to my "aunt" the hoax worked beautifully, and nobody suspected a thing.

The strange revelation has me in a state of shock. I don't doubt that it is true because all my life people have told me I am a carbon copy of my "aunt." I don't resemble either of my "parents" in the slightest.

Should I tell my husband and his mother about this? I have no proof, but I'm almost certain the story is true. — Stranger Than Fiction

Dear Stranger: Nothing is to be gained by repeating this bizarre story which could be a figment of auntie's imagination. If you want to tell the story to your husband, go ahead, but don't give it any wider distribution.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I lost my husband a few years ago and recently married a fine man who has many wonderful qualities.

He bought us a beautiful home and from all outward appearances we should be very happy. The problem is with my children. My husband is a strict disciplinarian, which I think is fine, but he makes a big fuss over things which I feel are unimportant.

For instance, he does not believe in using sugar, white bread, catsup, or salt and pepper. He doesn't touch mashed potatoes, hot dogs, or hamburgers. My children are forever getting lectures on eating "what is good for them." Meal time is becoming a nightmare.

I hope this does not sound like a lot of nonsense, Ann, because it is a problem that is actually pulling our marriage apart. My husband admits he is too much of a perfectionist and he has demonstrated his willingness to talk things over with me. Please tell me how to deal with the problem. — Torn

Dear Torn: Surely you knew how your husband felt about sugar, catsup, salt and pepper before you married him. That was the time to decide whether they would be served to other members of the family. Since these foods are not harmful your husband should not inflict his hang-ups on others.

On the other hand, you should allow him to discipline the children without interference. I suspect you have been somewhat permissive and the change could be very good for them, provided, of course, he doesn't go overboard. This is where you should be the balance wheel.

No teen-ager is as confident as he appears. Get clued in. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Paraffin Is Tough to Get Off Patio

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

Q: Children playing with melted paraffin spilled some on our concrete patio. It left an unsightly blob. How to remove this?

A: Not easy, rarely 100 per cent successful. It requires blotting while the paraffin is again melted. Try holding an iron, set to moderate heat, over a sheet of clean white blotting paper placed over the spot. Time and patience are essential. It's also possible to use a blowtorch to do the melting, and quickly cover with "blotting" cloths as soon as the flame is removed. But this one calls for experience.

Q: When the kitchen sink began to drain slowly, I unscrewed the trap cap and scraped out everything I could reach in the trap area. It wasn't much, nor was there much hard-caked soap. But still this drainage is slow. What can I try next?

A: It's probable that one of the draincleaning chemicals will do the job. Just follow label directions. If still no go, try one of those long, springy cables with an adjustable handle known as a plumber's snake, starting it in through the trap opening and working behind the trap. Still no go? Call the plumber.

Q: The eradicator solutions worked fairly well on the ink stain on the wallpaper. But even three "passes" with it couldn't get the stain out. Further, it seemed to bleach the wallpaper design. Any suggestions?

A: Patch the eyesore (hoping you have a spare piece of the same pattern). Don't use scissors to cut the patch slightly larger than necessary. Instead, tear the piece, working from the back. This will give you feather edging on the front, which you want. Generously smear the back of the patch with paste, and slide it into exact position. Press out and wipe away any excess paste.

Q: My vacuum cleaner hasn't the drawing power it used to have. I changed the bag, which helped some. The hose itself seems to have a few leaks when it is bent. How can I fix this?

A: Tightly and generously wrap spirals of plastic tape around the suspect areas. Overlap the windings.

Q: A bottle of hair dye, containing silver nitrate according to the label, left an indelible stain when it spilled in my wash basin. I've tried every cleaner in the house. Is there anyway to do this clean-up?

A: If there's a photographic darkroom in the house, your troubles are over. First wipe the stain with ordinary iodine, which will change the color. Then rinse with a moderate solution of photographic hypo. The stain will vanish. If you have no hypo, get a small box at any camera shop. Mixing directions are right on the box.

Children Aren't Bums Just Because They Trick or Treat

BY DR. EVE JONES

Dear Dr. Jones: I didn't let my children go trick or treating because I think this is nothing but highway robbery. I explain.

Eve Jones

ed it very carefully to them, and at the time, I thought they understood my reasons and felt proud that they weren't going to go around asking for handouts. But today I overheard them talking with each other, and they were saying that I'm nothing but an old mean person who didn't want to go out on Halloween because I was afraid everyone would take me for a real witch.

How can I make them understand this is a matter of principle? They're four and five, both girls. Last year they had their tonsils out at Halloween so they didn't realize anything special was going on, and of course, before that they were too young to notice. Please help me make them feel love for me again and help them accept a more mature idea. MRS. H. W.

Right now, they should be allowed to celebrate holidays. Trick and treating doesn't create bums for life.

Dear Dr. Jones: In two articles in the past few months, Dr. Spock, the noted child care authority, seemed to have changed two of the important suggestions that he made to mothers of my generation

First, he said that he thought parents should toilet train their children. Then, in a later article, he said that he wasn't necessarily against spanking.

I followed his advice against both of these practices when I was bringing up my youngsters, and I found these ideas very valuable. In fact, that's one of the reasons why I so wholeheartedly approve of most of your suggestions, you seem to be following along the same lines of common sense combined with a deep understanding of what children want and need.

What do you have to say about his current revisions? Are you planning to change your views, too? MRS. C. R.

I believe Dr. Spock's current return to ideas that were prevalent before World War II is an unfortunate happening. I have no understanding of his reasons for making these changes. I can assure you that my own experience with the reactions of parents does not bear up Dr. Spock's current belief that most parents cannot follow such rules.

I have no plans, therefore, to make any changes in my suggestions to parents that they avoid toilet training and spanking their youngsters.

"To Spank or Not to Spank" can be ordered by sending 25 cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope to Dr. Eve Jones, in care of The Post-Crescent

Traditional Thanksgiving Dinner? Forget It—Black Bear Too Costly

By SALLY RYAN
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — All that talk about the good old days, forget it. If you ate like the Pilgrims, Thursday's Thanksgiving dinner would cost you about three times as much.

And you would have to skip the cranberries and pumpkin pie.

Once wild turkeys were plentiful near Plymouth Plantation in Massachusetts, and bear and venison were mainstays for dinner.

But now wild turkey is $2.35 a pound, native black bear roast $3.50, and venison back roast $2.55.

$1.51 a Person

If you wanted to throw a little 17th-century Thanksgiving dinner for 142 — 52 colonists and 90 Indians — it would cost you $678.76, or $4.78 a person. That's with wild turkey, venison, bear, mussels, eels and succotash.

If you'd settle for the traditional 20th-century version, you could scrape by for $214.77 — $1.51 a person. That's for just plain turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie and all that.

You might want to do without wild rice, though. There was too much water in Minnesota's lakes this year, and the wild rice grown there is selling for $9.33 a pound, nearly double the price of a year ago.

In New England, they say, Gov. William Bradford proclaimed the first Thanksgiving in 1621 in Virginia, where everything is a little older, they say the first celebration was at Jamestown in 1619.

The Pilgrims didn't leave any engraved menus around. Neither did their Indian guests. The experts can only guess what they ate.

Colonist's Letter

The good ladies at Plymouth Plantation, the reconstructed village in Massachusetts, have turned up a letter Edward Winslow wrote in December 1621, telling of fish and fowl in abundance, eels in September, mussels, grapes — both red and white, and Indians who brought oysters.

Bradford Smith, a descendant of the governor, says there were wild turkeys, eels, fish, corn bread and wine, but no potatoes and probably no onions, cranberries, pie or sugar.

Other historians talk about roast turkey, venison, bear, geese, ducks, fish, corn bread, nuts, succotash, journey cake, corn pumpkins and honey.

The Associated Press took this shopping list to a supermarket chain and a New York store that sells gourmet foods to see how much the 17th-century dinner would cost today.

Bill Itemized

The bill rounded off, adds up to 17 cents for each guest for oysters, 17 more for eels, 6 for mussels, 10 for corn on the cob, 3 for pumpkin squash, 4 for honey, 5 for red grapes and 10 for white, 24 for walnuts, and 60 cents for wine.

Wild turkey adds 94 cents, native black bear roasts $1.16 and venison 84.

Add 5 more cents for corn muffins, the closest thing a supermarket has to New England journey cake. 11 cents for codfish and 12 cents for succotash — canned Brunswick stew to mollify the Virginians.

It adds up to a lot more than what usually is cited as the most expensive Thanksgiving dinner in modern times — $2.15 per person back in 1951.

Safety Group Asks For Flashing Lights On S. Oneida Street

Appleton Council Urged to Okay Signals for Crossing Protection

Amber flasher signals for the protection of pedestrians crossing the street in the "industrial flats" were recommended Wednesday by the council's public safety committee.

The signals would be erected at S. Water Street on Oneida Street.

The Appleton Machine Co. has requested assistance from the city in protecting workers crossing the street in a crosswalk area.

Although special signs have been erected to warn motorists of pedestrian activity, the committee was told they are being ignored.

Shuttle Equipment

In addition to employees, equipment is shuttled back and forth periodically, it was reported.

Ald. Paul Klemmer (11th) felt all previous attempts by the city to remedy the safety hazard had not been successful and pushed for traffic signals.

However, city planner-traffic engineer Walter Rasmussen was somewhat dubious about halting northbound and southbound vehicular traffic on Oneida Street, contending cars would be backed up for blocks.

No Defense

Rasmussen did, with some reluctance, recommend the installation of the amber crossing warning signals which will cost about $1,200.

"However, I would say we would be in no position to defend complaints should we begin stopping 10,000 cars a day in that area," Rasmussen said.

Police Chief Earl O. Wolff said motorists apparently disregard existing pedestrian signs.

Klemmer didn't think the amber lights would solve the problem and appeared to favor regular stop-and-go signals.

Wolf Planners Call Land Conference

Seek to Solve Inequities in Reimbursements

New methods of paying local governments for state and federally owned lands will be discussed at a public lands conference Dec. 6 in Crandon, Forest County.

The conference, sponsored by the Wolf River Basin Regional Planning Commission, is designed to check into possible inequities of present state and federal reimbursements.

The large government units presently pay local governments for property such as national forests in lump sums rather than in the form of taxes. Wolf River commission officials said Wednesday they hope to come up with some ideas for revamping the reimbursements, both in amount and the methods used in determining the amount.

Of particular interest will be the Nicolet National Forest, a large wood land area in northeastern Wisconsin owned by the federal government.

The conference will meet at 9:30 a.m. in the Crandon courthouse. State and federal legislators and town and county board chairmen from Florence, Forest, Vilas and Langlade counties have been invited.

Other Wolf River commission member counties have been notified as well as planning commissioners from Forest and Langlade counties.

The meeting is entitled "Impact of Federal and State Owned Lands on Financial Structure of Local Government."

Mrs. Van Asten previously wrote city officials and appeared at the annual budget hearing, pointing out combining of police and fire departments has realized economy and made for efficiency in some cities where it has been tried.

A streamer and decoration is strung across the main intersection in the heart of the business district.

City Home Seeks Status Of Medicare Patients

Lacking County Information Officials Ask State for Position of Certified Residents

Appleton City Home officials have contacted the state for information on Medicare provisions for elderly.

James J. Hickinbotham, home superintendent, expressed concern recently that the Jan. 1 date for the new medical assistance program goes into effect and the future status of some home residents has not been ascertained.

The city home, according to information received by Hickinbotham, is licensed as a skilled nursing home, but will not qualify under the Medicare provisions going into effect at the end of the year.

Concern Shown

In a letter to Thomas J. Lucas, Madison, director of the division of public assistance, State Department of Welfare, Hickinbotham cited the problem and added, "We therefore are very concerned for those patients of the city home that are presented certified as MA (medical assistance) patients, and what to expect by the Jan. 1 deadline."

"We have conferred with our county welfare department and the authorities and they can not give us an answer to our question regarding those 19 MA patients now in the home," Hickinbotham told Lucas.

A county welfare department official recently met with the city council's welfare-ordinance committee and city home officials but admittedly could give no idea at this time as to what to the holiday.

City officials and Appleton Water Commission representatives reached agreement this morning that money would be available for the start of the long-planned water expansion project.

An informal meeting was held in the mayor's conference room, just 24 hours after the water commission had met and criticized city officials for allegedly delaying a Lake Winnebago pipeline project.

It was an amicable, informal session presided over by Mayor George Buckley and attended by Finance Director Henry Schreve, City Atty. David Geenen, Water Commissioners Robert DeLand and Robert Roemer and Dr. William Gallaher, water plant superintendent.

Problem Anticipated

However, it was indicated the city's financial consultants in Minneapolis have advised there would be some problems in floating a revenue bond.

It has been estimated the pipeline project and an addition to the waterplant will cost about $4.5 million and take at least a year to build.

The city has applied for a $1.5 million federal grant and will not have a final decision on its application until the end of the year.

Stumbling Block

Awaiting the outcome of the grant request has apparently been a stumbling block, it was indicated this morning.

In the past, the city considered floating a $3 million bond issue with the federal government picking up the rest of the expense.

However, the water commission says the city should proceed without the federal aid if it isn't available soon — calling for a $4.5 million revenue bond issue.

Because the water department has about $300,000 to $350,000 in revenue bonds still outstanding from a previous project, the city's financial consultants have questioned going into the market in the near future for the $4.5 million amount to cover the entire cost of the lake project.

Stipulation Cited

There is also a "catch" to the outstanding revenue bond issue, a stipulation which states the city water department could not issue additional bonds until the entire outstanding debt has been paid up.

Consultants have indicated there is a legal way of getting around the stipulation, but conceded it will take time and have not figured on another revenue bond issue for the water department until summer of 1967.

Schreve said in recent contact with the financial consultants, it was suggested a revenue bond be floated to cover just the first stage of the water expansion project.

Water department officials say the plant expansion should be given top priority with the pipeline to follow.

Bond Intentions

It was also reminded this morning the city has intentions of floating a revenue bond issue for the Soldiers Square parking ramp shortly after Jan. 1.

"We don't want Appleton to be going into the bond market too often," Schreve commented. "It may not look so good."

However, he gave assurance

Union Drops Labor Plaint

Park N' Market Agree to Contract Of Meat Cutters

A National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) trial examiner has ordered dismissal of unfair labor practices complaints against Park N' Market, Inc., which has two stores in Appleton and another in Neenah.

Thomas S. Wilson issued the order after the company agreed to carry out the terms of a contract entered into Nov. 2 after employees in the meat departments joined a union.

The membership campaign had been conducted by Local No. 73 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of North America, AFL-CIO.

Dispute Developed

A dispute developed when the company claimed the union had not obtained the required membership majority to represent the work unit.

However, after the union filed a complaint with the NLRB and its prosecuting division issued a complaint, a mutual understanding was reached after the first day of a hearing before Wilson.

Both parties agreed to make certain stipulations leading to dismissal of charges against the company.

Referring to the agreement reached midway in the hearing, resulting in the latter being adjourned, Wilson said in his order dated Nov. 18, "It appears from said motion that general counsel (NLRB) is satisfied that said settlement of the parties effectuates the purposes of the police policies of the (Labor) Act."

Request Granted

He granted the union's request to withdraw the charges and dismissed the complaint. The order becomes final upon approval of the National Labor Relations Board at Washington.

Copies were sent the union and Atty. Gordon Gill, who represented the company.

Construction of Tower to Start At Nuclear Site

Construction of a 150-foot-high steel tower at the future site of the Point Beach Nuclear Plant in the Town of Two Creeks, will be started sometime next week, J. S. Wells, vice president of Wisconsin Michigan Power Company, said today. The tower will be used to collect weather data.

Other preliminary site preparation will also begin next week, he said. The site preparation includes grading and two construction roads.

Since preparation will take about two months, he estimated. Portions of the area will be covered with straw to permit an early start of construction next spring. Site preparation will be done by Streu Construction Co., a Two Rivers contractor.

State Sets $59 Maximum Pay For Unemployed

A new $59 top weekly benefit rate will begin in January, under Wisconsin's unemployment compensation law, the industrial commission announced today. The present top rate is $58.

The law requires the new maximum because the average wages of Wisconsin workers were higher during the year ended June 30, 1966 than during calendar 1965.

Based on reports from employers, the industrial commission has determined that the state-wide average gross weekly wage was $112.60 in the 12-month period ending June 30, 1966, for a monthly average of $83,686 workers covered by Wisconsin's unemployment compensation law in that year. The law takes 52½ per cent of that weekly figure, and then rounds the result to the nearest dollar multiple, which results in $59.

Committee to Study Textbook Rental System Of 8 State Universities

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Abandonment of the textbook rental system, now in effect at eight state universities, is being studied by a committee of four university presidents which will recommend action to the Board of Regents of State Colleges.

Rental of textbooks, with a student option to purchase from the prescribed list, has been traditional at the state universities. At the University of Wisconsin at Madison, in contrast, students buy their own textbooks, which results in a somewhat higher cost to them.

The state university study results from a desire of some faculty members for greater freedom in choosing textbooks, officials said.

WSU-O Production

Opera Workshop's 'Albert Herring' Rated Delightful Comic Production

BY JAMES AUER

Post-Crescent Sunday Editor

MENASHA — Many nations and many talents are represented in "Albert Herring," the full-length comic opera brought to the stage of the UW-Fox Valley Center's Fine Arts Room Tuesday evening by the WSU-O Opera Workshop.

The story (by Guy de Maupassant) is French; the libretto (by Eric Crozier) and score (by Benjamin Britten), British, and the present cast, indubitably American.

Yet somehow, despite this unlikely combination of ethnic ingredients, Britten's bubbling brew of Gallic wit and British provincial stolidity proved to be, potentially amusing stuff, as served up by a cast of WSU-O faculty members and students under the direction of Karl Carroll.

One of the season's more substantial audiences — including, happily, a considerable number of youngsters — listened with delight as the company, gaily costumed and working before simple but effective settings, acted out the story of Albert Herring, the green-grocer's son who becomes an unwilling King of the May.

Certain Dangers

There is always a certain danger — when American casts attempt scripts satirizing British social institutions — that the nuances of the commentary will be lost. This is particularly true when many of the actors are non-professionals.

Fortunately, in the present instance, the director, a member of the WSU-O music faculty, has in Suzanne Roy, another faculty member, a delightfully indomitable Lady Billows, "elderly autocrat" who dominates the village's annual fertility rite.

Well matched against Miss Roy's vocal strength and dramatic vitality are Rita Anderson, a student from Green Bay, as Florence Pike, her all-knowing housekeeper, and — in the pivotal role of the meek but far from malleable Albert — Douglas Carroll, a student from Oshkosh.

Carroll, in particular, is caught up in the spirit of the "veddy British" festivities, and his appearance as the symbol of Springtime purity — decked out in a white suit, and wearing an orange blossom crown — is the visual high point of the evening.

Supporting roles are nicely handled by Dennis Doverspike

KAC Board Votes Election Rules For Next Year

KAUKAUNA — Directors of the Kaukauna Athletic Club voted to change the by-laws of the organization to permit officers to be elected by board members rather than at the annual membership meeting.

Hereafter the organization will be run by a 12-man board, four to be elected each year for four year terms. The president, vice president, secretary and treasurer will be selected from the board. To initiate the change, members will elect eight directors in January, four for 2-year terms and four for 1-year terms. The club secretary, treasurer and two board members from this year will hold their offices for another year.

In 1968 four board members will be elected for a 3-year term after which the 4-year terms of election will take effect. The change was made as the former method of election would result in only one hold-over board member for the coming year.

Board members felt experience should be maintained on the board as the organization sponsors two scholarships at Kaukauna High School, the Legion baseball team, Fox Valley League baseball team and many other activities.

Lawrence Places Five Players on the All-MC Football Team for '66

Five Lawrence University football players have been named to the all-Midwest Conference team for 1966. Vikes named to the first offensive unit are quarterback Chuck McKee and tackle Bill Benowicz. Selected for first-team defensive honors are linebacker Gary Hietpas, tackle Bill Mittlefehldt and halfback Ken Koskelin. Four more Vikings were named to the second team. Bob Bleier to Miss Game Against USC

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Notre Dame's already depleted offensive unit received another jolt Tuesday when it was learned halfback Bob Bleier will miss the Southern Cal game Saturday. Bleier has been hospitalized with a bruised kidney. With quarterback Terry Hanratty and halfback Bob Gladieux also out definitively with injuries and halfback Nick Eddy questionable because of a bruised shoulder, Coach Ara Parseghian had to dig deep for offensive backs. Parseghian moved defensive backs Dan Harshman and Tom Quinn to the offense.

Montreal Blanks The Red Wings

DETROIT (AP) — Sid Abel stood in the gloom of the Detroit Red Wings' locker room and shook his head. "I just don't know," the Detroit general manager-coach said. "If I had the answers, we'd be winning." He had just watched his Red Wings skate sluggishly and shoot futilely in absorbing a 3-0 whipping from the Montreal Canadiens in the only National Hockey League game played Tuesday night. The loss left the Wings mired in last place and facing another road trip. They meet Boston Thursday and Montreal Saturday. So far, the Wings haven't scored a point on the road.

Kelly, Green Test Tough Cowboy Line

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer
While most of the country sits back and digests that big Thanksgiving Day turkey, Bob Lilly and the rest of the Dallas Cowboys' defensive line will try to gobble up Cleveland's twin running terrors: Leroy Kelly and Ernie Green.

Dallas, tied for the National Football League's Eastern Conference lead with St. Louis, hosts the third-place Browns in the key clash of a three-game holiday pro football schedule. In another NFL game, San Francisco plays at Detroit. In the American League, Buffalo visits Oakland.

Lilly is the 6-foot-5, 255-pound tackle who anchors the Cowboys' defensive line. Last Sunday he lowered the boom four times on Pittsburgh quarterback Ron Smith as the Cowboys beat the Steelers 20-7.

On Thursday Lilly will have to concern himself not only with Frank Ryan, Cleveland's fine quarterback, but also with Kelly and Green, who've given the Browns a potent running attack.

Kelly rushed for 107 yards in Cleveland's 14-3 victory over Washington last week and took the NFL lead. He has gained 830 yards in 157 attempts and scored 10 touchdowns. Green is fourth in rushing with 640 yards in 117 attempts.

San Francisco will try to bounce back from a tough 35-34 loss to Philadelphia but the 49ers will have to find a defense for the NFL's newest place kicking sensation, Garo Yepremian.

Yepremian, the left-footed soccer-type Cypriot kicker, booted two field goals as the Lions upset Baltimore 20-14 last Sunday.

Buffalo, leading the AFL's Eastern Division by a full game, can put more distance between itself and pursuing Boston and New York.

But the Bills will have a battle on their hands against the Raiders, who've won six of their last seven and jumped into second place in the Western Division.

The other pro teams play Sunday. In the National League, Atlanta is at Chicago, Green Bay visits Minnesota, Los Angeles takes on Baltimore, New York is at Washington and Pittsburgh takes on St. Louis.

In the American League, New York entertains Kansas City, San Diego is at Denver and Boston plays at Miami.

Bays Face Tarkenton Again; Bratkowski Wins AP Award

Zeke Named Week's Top Offensive Man

NEW YORK (AP) — Zeke Bratkowski is the super sub of the National Football League. The 35-year-old veteran of 12 pro seasons usually sits on the bench while Bart Starr does his stuff for the Green Bay Packers.

Sometimes Vince Lombardi lets him work out the kinks in his arm by caving with the million-dollar twins, Donny Anderson and Jim Grabowski, after a game is all locked up. In two games, Brat didn't throw a pass. In two others, he threw a total of eight.

But last Sunday, Starr suffered a pulled hamstring in the second period. Lombardi had to fall back on Bratkowski, the man who bailed him out last year after Starr was injured on the first play of the tie playoff game.

Bratkowski was equal to the challenge. He completed 14 of 25 for 187 yards and the two Packers touchdowns of a 13-6 victory over their old rivals, the Chicago Bears. One score came on a six-yard pitch to Carroll Dale and the other on a 33-yard-toss to Dale in the final period.

"I try to prepare myself just like Bart so there isn't any big adjustment to be made," said Bratkowski.

As a result of this pressure job, Bratkowski has been named by The Associated Press as the Offensive Player of the Week in the NFL.

'We've Handled Him Before,' Says Lombardi of Viking QB

GREEN BAY (AP) — The Green Bay Packers, fresh from clearing the obstinate obstacle posed by the Chicago Bears, face another high hurdle Sunday when they journey to Minnesota for a rematch with the Vikings.

Back at quarterback for the Vikings will be Francis Tarkenton, the whirling dervish who beat Green Bay 20-17 in the only home loss suffered this season by the National Football League's Western Conference leaders.

Tarkenton sat out the first half of last Sunday's 21-6 loss to the Los Angeles Rams and was unimpressive against the Detroit Lions the week before.

But against the Packers Nov. 6 he was at his spectacular best, completing 16 of 26 passes for 162 yards. He gained another 22 yards rushing.

"We've handled him before," said Green Bay Coach Vince Lombardi. "It all depends on how good Tarkenton is on that day. That's what it amounts to."

In Hot Streak
Green Bay tried stopping Tarkenton, who was in a hot streak, by restraining their pass rush. In effect, they gave the scramble all the room he wanted to take in back of the line of scrimmage while trying to close off the outside and inside running lanes to his forward thrusts.

Members of the Packers' front four, used to playing with abandon, were as self-conscious as lumberjacks at a literary tea. They got to Tarkenton only once all afternoon and found themselves vulnerable to the Vikings' running game, particularly in the second half.

The pass-hungry Green Bay secondary didn't intercept a single Tarkenton throw as Francis romped behind the line of scrimmage for 10 seconds and more until one of his receivers worked his way open.

Tarkenton, who was the hottest quarterback in the NFL the last time the Packers met the Vikings, has cooled off considerably. The Lions picked off five of his passes two Sundays ago. Last weekend Minnesota Coach Norm Van Brocklin went to former Wisconsin star Ron VanderKelen as his starter with Tarkenton taking over after permission.

Together, the quarterbacks gained just 43 yards passing and 10 first downs in the 21-6 defeat.

Van Brocklin didn't blame his quarterbacks. The Rams' defense, he said, "dominated our defensive line — gave them a licking. We were never able to establish any sort of offensive pattern."

New Badger Coach Will be Offered 3-Year Contract

Bruhn Again Indicates He Will Seek Coaching Post Elsewhere

By JAMES R. POLK
MADISON (AP) — Wisconsin toasted Milt Bruhn farewell Tuesday and launched its search for a successor by dangling what he never got — a fixed-term contract as head football coach.

The 54-year-old Bruhn, who resigned under fire last week, was praised as "a great gentleman and a great coach" at the university's annual football banquet only hours after the athletic board met to begin the national hunt.

Law Prof. Frank Remington, the board's chairman, offered a tentative deadline for Dec. 9 to name a new coach.

Remington said screening of candidates would start next week and instructed Athletic Director Ivan Williamson "to receive, solicit, seduce and whatever you do to applicants."

The group voted to offer a three-year contract to the new coach. Bruhn had been considered on a season-to-season assignment as a member of the faculty in his 11 years as head football coach at Wisconsin.

Bruhn, who first came to Wisconsin as line coach in 1949, drew praise at the banquet from everyone from the state's governor and former pro great Alan (The Horse) Ameche to this year's team, which presented a special plaque to him.

Gov. Warren P. Knowles lauded Bruhn as "a great gentleman and a great coach." University President Fred Harvey Harrington said, "He has done well by us and we all love him."

Bruhn, who took Wisconsin to the Rose Bowl twice and still had a winning record despite losing marks the last three seasons, said, "Gentlemen, it's been a great 17 years at Wisconsin."

He said the decision to quit was his own and was made two weeks before the season end, but he admitted, "It's hard to get away from it."

Bruhn, offered an unspecified desk job in the athletic department, indicated again he would seek a coaching post elsewhere. He vowed lasting loyalty to Wisconsin football "wherever I might be."

Bruhn appeared in private at the athletic board meeting to present any suggestions on a successor.

The board set its next meeting. Turn to Page 5, Col. 8

Spurrier Tops Balloting for Heisman Honor

Purdue's Griesse Runs Second; Eddy Finishes Third

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Steve Spurrier was on the practice field Tuesday doing calisthenics with his Florida teammates less than two hours after he learned he won the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding college football player of 1966.

"There's not much chance to celebrate," Spurrier told newsmen at a hastily arranged press conference.

"We've got Miami to think about, and you can't let up before a game like that," he said. Spurrier was as poised before the cameras and floodlights and endless questions as he has been on the Saturdays he has led the Gators from behind to nearly unbelievable victories.

"It was certainly a thrill," he admitted. "The margin I won it by shocked me a little, though," he said. "Florida didn't play on television this season and we were not seen over the country."

He got 433 of the 869 first-place votes from the nation's sports writers and a total of 1,679 points. Second-place Bob Griesse of Purdue had 184 firsts and 816 points.

Bob Richter Badgers' MVP

Next in points were Nick Eddy of Notre Dame 456, Gary Behan of UCLA 318, Floyd Little of Syracuse 296 and Clint Jones of Michigan State 204.

Florida and Spurrier will be seen on television in the Orange Bowl game against Georgia Tech the night of Jan. 2. He is looking forward to it.

At every opportunity, he mentioned his teammates, sharing with them this and all other honors he might win.

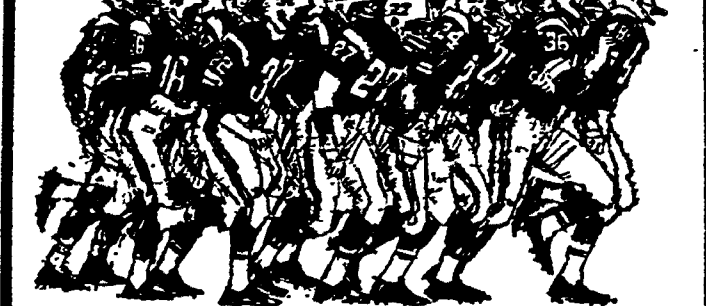

"I know the other players are almost as happy as I am," he said. "They are a great bunch. With this team it's all for one."

He was asked to look ahead, beyond this Saturday's regular season wind-up against Miami, beyond his trip to New York to receive the Heisman Trophy Dec. 1, beyond the Orange Bowl at Miami, beyond the Hula Bowl in Hawaii, Jan. 6 — to the time he will play as a professional.

"I don't know which team will draft me," he said. "Some people say it will be the New York Giants. If I do go to the Giants, it will be a real opportunity, but

Knicks Have Cazzie Russell Riding Bench

$200,000 Player Having Trouble Getting Into Lineup

BY MIKE RECHT
NEW YORK (AP) — Cazzie Russell, who amazed basketball fans with his fantastic play as a collegian, has puzzled them with his lack of action as a pro.
The man picked to lead the New York Knicks out of the Eastern Division cellar of the National Basketball Association is riding the bench.
"Sometimes when I'm in my hotel room late at night I sit and wonder why they even drafted me," Russell said. "And paid me all that money."
But he added:
"I knew it wouldn't be easy, but I'm not discouraged or de- pendent. I think I'll get to play."

Off to Best Start
The Knicks, off to their best start in years, feel the same way.

"The fact that Cazzie isn't playing much is unfortunate," said General Manager Eddie Donovan, "but that's how it is in this game."

"But he'll get his chance. I still think he's going to be a fine ballplayer."
Russell, Mr. Everything as an All-America at Michigan last year, received a reported $200,000 multi-year contract to sign with the Knicks. But he is only playing about five minutes a game.

"That's not enough time to see what I can do," he said, "but the coach has to go with the guys who can win now."

Russell is unlikely to beat out Willis Reed or Dick Van Arsdale at forward, leaving the guard position as his best chance, but that has presented problems not new for a college player joining the pros.

As a 6-foot-5½ guard, Russell has had trouble guarding smaller, quicker men, like the New York starting guards Emmette Bryant and Butch Kivimies.
"Some people think I'm weak defensively," Russell said, "but all I need is more experience at getting by picks and screens. They have a lot more picks and less plays in the pros than in college. That's the big difference."

"I'd rather play against a big guard — it's tough against those little guys — but I think the answer is just getting accustomed to players in the league. It's just a matter of time."

Adding more pressure to Russell and the Knicks is the play thus far of Dave Bing of Detroit. Bing was Detroit's draft pick after the Pistons lost a toss of the coin and Russell, who was to fill the house at Detroit and lead the Pistons out of the cellar.

Royals, Bullets Triumph in NBA Twin Bill

NEW YORK (AP) — In school you learn the three Rs. Tuesday night, the Cincinnati Royals gave New York a basketball lesson in the two Rs — Robertson and Robinson.

Super star Oscar Robertson played the kind of game expected of him and Flynn Robinson spurred a Cincinnati surge as the Royals beat the Knickerbockers 121-118 in the second game of a National Basketball Association doubleheader at Madison Square Garden.

Baltimore defeated San Francisco 125-117 in the first game. There was no other NBA action. Flynn, who didn't get into the game until just three minutes were left in the third period, sparked the Royals' fourth quarter drive in which they outscored New York 36-25.

In the final 12 minutes, Flynn, a 6-footer with quick moves, hit on five baskets, pulled down two rebounds and made several steals. He finished with 12 points.

Carthage Not Happy Over Harrier Vote

KENOSHA (AP) — Oshkosh was picked over Carthage as Wisconsin's best small college cross country team and Carthage is plainly unhappy.
Carthage defeated Oshkosh in the fall sport and also turned back Marquette as the Redmen long distance runners defeated every Wisconsin team they met.
But Oshkosh won the annual cross country honors handed out by NAIA District 14 (Wisconsin) recently and the Oshkosh coach was named the district's "Coach of the Year."
"If this is a sample of what Carthage College and the other non-Wisconsin State University Conference schools are in for via your unique balloting techniques," said the sports publicity director of Carthage in a letter to George Schmidt, "Then I think it would be wise for Carthage to disassociate itself from NAIA District 14."

WSU-O Swim Team Loses 'Cheese' Meet

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — They swam and they swam and came up with a cheese.
That's what the Plattsburgh State swimming team did Tuesday when they defeated Oshkosh, Wis., State's swimmers, 52-43, in the third annual telegraph meet between the two schools.

The swimmers use their own pools and send the results via telegraph to the other school.
The losers must send the winners a 10-pound block of cheese — a key competitive product in Wisconsin and New York, two of the nation's leading dairy states.

Pete Stone was Plattsburgh's top performer, winning the 1,000-yard and 500-yard freestyle races and taking first in the individual medley.

Oshkosh had won the two previous telegraphic meets.

Coaches' All-Star Team Dominated By ND and MSU

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame placed four players and Michigan State three on the 1966 all-star team announced Tuesday by the American Football Coaches Association.

Players from the Irish were guard Tom Regner, back Nick Eddy, tackle Pete Duranko and linebacker Jim Lynch. Michigan State placed ends Gene Washington and Bubba Smith and defensive back George Webster. Quarterbacks on the 25-man squad were Steven Spurrier, Heisman Trophy winner from Purdue.

The rest of the offensive team included:
End Jack Clancy, Michigan; tackles Ron Yary, Southern California, and Wayne Mass, Clemson; guard Cecil Dowdy, Alabama; center Jim Breland, Georgia Tech; running backs Floyd Little, Syracuse, and Mel Perkins, Alabama.

On defense, the team included:
End Tom Greenlee, Washington; tackles Lloyd Phillips, Arkansas, and Wayne Meylan, Nebraska; middle guard John LaGrone, SMU; linebacker Paul Naumoff, Tennessee, and defensive backs Nate Shaw, Southern California, Martine Bercher, Arkansas, and Tom Beier, Miami.

Texas' Bowl Hopes at Stake

Nebraska to Battle Oklahoma Thursday

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer
Nebraska's 50-0 chances and Texas' bowl chances will be at stake Thursday when both clubs close out their regular college football seasons with traditional Thanksgiving Day contests.

The Cornhuskers, No. 4 in this week's Associated Press college football poll, could conceivably improve on their position with a convincing victory over Oklahoma and a little luck.

And the Longhorns will reportedly be offered the host berth to play Mississippi in the Bluebonnet Bowl Dec. 17 in Houston if they beat Texas A&M Thursday.

Nebraska is 9-0 this season and will play Alabama, 8-0 and the No. 3 team, in the Sugar Bowl. The Crimson Tide appears to be a sure thing against Southern Mississippi on Saturday, but could have a little rougher time against Auburn the following week.

Notre Dame, No. 1, takes on a rugged Southern California club Saturday and an upset or close contest in that game, coupled with a strong Nebraska showing Thursday, could pave the way for a Cornhusker advance in the poll. Michigan State, No. 2, is through for the season.

Has 53 Record

Oklahoma, however, may be no pushover for Nebraska. The Sooners won their first four games of the season before succumbing to Notre Dame. They are 5-3 over-all now after a close 10-7 loss to Missouri last week.

As for Texas, their bowl chances were revealed by the Austin American Tuesday and Coach Darrell Royal confirmed

Kansas City Holds Lead in Total Offense

NEW YORK (AP) — Kansas City, doing most of its traveling along the ground, continues to hold a wide edge in total offense in the American Football League.

Statistics released by the AFL today show the Chiefs averaging 361.1 yards per game—a shade less than 33 yards per game more than second place Buffalo. Veteran Bert Coan and rookie Mike Garrett carry the brunt of the Kansas City running game, which is averaging 151.3 yards per game—almost 14 more than second-place Boston.

Oakland leads the league in total defense, yielding 250.3 yards per game, 1.4 yards less than New York.

Good Day Against Bears Kostelnik Hopes Last Sunday's Game Was Turning Point for Him

BY LEE REMMEL
It may come as something of a surprise to most of the Packers faithful, who weren't aware of any artistic decline on his part, but mountaineer Ron Kostelnik fondly hopes he now has turned the competitive corner.

Attracting attention for defensive heroics as a member of the Pack's brilliant platoon is no mean feat, but the massive defensive tackle pulled it off in last Sunday's 13-6 decision of the Chicago Bears.

He not only twice decked Bruin quarterback Rudy Bukich for losses but also trapped the Midway Monsters' gifted Gale Sayers behind the line of scrimmage on another occasion during the course of a large afternoon in the Bear battlefield.

"Had a Bad Start"
It had been a satisfying day, the 250-pound University of Cincinnati alumnus admitted, explaining, "I definitely have not been having a good year — not nearly as good a year as I had last year. I've had a few problems. Up to this point, I'm not as satisfied as I was last year."

"I had a bad start this season," he continued. "It's nothing specific, but I just haven't been playing as well as I felt I could be. . . I hope that Sunday's game was a turning point."

Did he find chasing Bukich something different than pursuing the vagrant Tarkenton, who again confronts the Pack in Minnesota this weekend? "It sure was different," Kos laughed, "quite different."

Contending with Sayers, he conceded, provided better practice for his upcoming assignment. "With both Tarkenton and Sayers, you never know what they're going to do — they're explosive."

"Toughest In League"
The Bears' all-anything, he added, "is definitely the toughest back in the league to handle. He's just like Unitas—with one minute left in the game, you've still got to be afraid of him."

"He has a lot of moves and he's a determined runner. When he goes into you, he's going. To get a few extra yards after you hit him, which is something the shifty runner usually doesn't do. Once you touch their ankles, they fall down. Not him."

Kos succeeded his current coach, Dave Hanner, as a regular in the Pack's front four midway through the 1964 season and he finds the situation tends to keep him alert, "Dave has played against everybody I play against," he chuckled, "so it's tough to lie to your teacher."

Ron, who attributes much of his overall improvement to Hanner's addition to the staff in 1965, added, "I feel he has made an excellent transition from a player to a coach."

The forthright Colver, Pa., native takes a different approach to his position than does running mate Henry Jordan, he explained. "I rely more on strength," he says, noting, "I'm not quick enough to be as evasive as Henry can be. I have to play exactly the way my keys tell me. Henry's so quick he can afford to gamble a little more."

Elaborating on this point, he appended, "We both follow the defensive pattern, but we often work out things together. On certain plays, for example, I'll hang back for a draw or a screen, and let Henry be the primary rusher."

Although in his sixth season, Kostelnik is a still youthful 26 and envisions a long career "barring any physical ills." Coaching he is quick to add, "doesn't appeal to me. There are a lot of headaches and not much reward, I'm afraid."

Married and the father of two children, the former Pennsylvanian has joined teammates Jordan, Bart Starr, Bob Skoronski and Jerry Kramer, among others, in making Green Bay his year-around home.

Marion Quint Deals Freedom 78-60 Defeat

Mustangs Score 47 Points in The Second Half

MARION — Holding a slim, 3 point lead at half, Marion exploded for 47 second half points and defeated Freedom, 78-60, in a non-conference game here Tuesday night.

Tom Jolin paced the Mustangs with 19 points, while Jim Braun and Ron Schewe added 14 and 13 markers, respectively.

Freedom's Jack Renkins, a 6-2 senior transfer from Pennings, led all scorers with 28 points.

Tied at the first quarter mark, Marion moved into a 31-28 halftime edge. The Mustangs increased their bulge to 10 after three periods and kept the heat on in the fourth quarter, counting 22 points to Freedom's 14.

Hortonville '11' Honors Komp Gary Named MVP; Meyer, Learman Are Co-Captains

HORTONVILLE — Gary Komp has been elected by his teammates as the most valuable player on the 1966 Hortonville High School football team which had a 4-5 record.

Komp, who played both half-back and flankerback this season, led the Polar Bears in scoring with 43 points and in pass receiving with 19 catches for 360 yards (an average of 18.9 yards per reception). He was the second leading rusher on the team with 334 yards in 73 attempts. He returned the opening kickoff 90 yards for a touchdown against Omro.

Gary also was fourth in tackles with 57 from his defensive halfback position.

Ken Meyer and Bob Learman were elected honorary co-captains. Meyer was a tight end and an outside linebacker. He was the second leading tackler on the team (with 59 tackles). He was also a fine blocker. He caught seven passes for 110 yards.

Learman played fullback and inside linebacker. He was the leading tackler on the team (66) despite missing a game and a half due to a foot injury. He was used mainly as a blocker but did carry the ball 47 times for 153 yards.

NOTES and NOTIONS

Two decisions — coming in the final minute or two is small, to be sure. Still, the very fact that the Irish didn't give it a whirl was hard for many to accept. Undeniably, the Irish played courageous football to stay even with the Spartans considering they had to go without Nick Eddy, their best breakthrough runner; No. 1 QB Terry Hanratty (who was hurt early) and their top center. This great effort, however, lost a little of its zest by the bland finish. What made Parseghian's "play it safe" concept stand out in bolder relief was Duffy Daugherty's gamble just minutes before. Faced with a fourth-and-1 play on the MSU 29, Daugherty risked a stab at the mountainous ND line in order to retain possession and go for victory. Of the two decisions, Koufax was the more personal one. Even though Dodger pennant chances are adversely affected and the loss of the game's No. 1 gate attraction isn't easy for baseball officials or fans, only Koufax could know under what kind of stress he had been pitching. Sandy alone had to weigh the chance of possible permanent disability against a probable record contract. Actually, there can be little debate about the verdict which Koufax arrived at deliberately and objectively.

New UW Coach Will Receive 3-Year Pact

ing for Dec. 1 to screen applications and Williamson said six already had been received. Remington said the board hoped to interview candidates and submit a recommendation to the regents to ratify at their Dec. 9 meeting.
If the deadline can't be met, he said, a name would be offered at the regents' Jan. 13 session or at a special meeting.
The three-year contract was suggested by Prof. Arthur Robinson who proposed the pact be subject to review and renewal at the end of the second year. The idea, including the automatic review, was accepted unanimously.
Robinson said his goal was a system of review of coaching contracts and added, "I think given MSU's Dick Kenney — a this would tend to reduce some of the outside pressure that builds up over a long run of let- things go from year to year."

Packers Have Scored First In Their Last 8 Contests

Post-Crescent News Service
GREEN BAY — The Bears were warming up before the game.
Dick Gordon, the Bears' split end standing near the sidelines, asked tight end Mike Ditka "can we do it?" meaning beat the Packers.
Ditka replied, "We can if we score first."
Mike apparently felt that, in view of the Pack's shutout victory over the Bears in Chicago Oct. 16, scoring first would give the Bears a great lift.
The Packers scored first, however, taking a 7-0 lead in the second quarter, and nursed it into a 13-6 triumph.
It is interesting to note that the Packers scored first in their last eight games, including the two they lost. But in Green Bay's "double championship" opener against Baltimore and Cleveland, the opponents scored first. The Colts took a 3-0 lead in the opener in Milwaukee and Green Bay won, 24-3. The Browns scored first, a 7-0 edge in the first quarter, but the Pack bounced back to win, 21-20.

Starr Still Best Passer

CHICAGO (AP) — Leroy Kelly of Cleveland has regained the rushing lead in the National Football League with a total of 830 yards and an average of 5.3 yards per carry.

Kelly, considered a cinch to join the 1,000-yard club before the Browns complete their season schedule, will be the man to watch Thursday when Cleveland challenges Dallas for the Eastern Conference lead.

In the first 11 weeks of play in the NFL, a player has gained 100 yards rushing just 16 times. Kelly has done it four times, including an even 100 last week against Washington. His total of 10 touchdowns rushing also is tops in the league.

Dick Bass of Los Angeles is close behind with 808 yards but the Rams have played 11 games to Cleveland's 10. Each will play 14 before the season ends. Gale Sayers of Chicago with 785 in 10 games also is a hot contender for Jim Brown's title.

Kelly Pacing NFL Runners

Starr still tops in passing with 1,143 yards, 11 touchdowns and a 6.2 average.

Starr, who has been the league's top passer since last year, has thrown 10 touchdowns and has a 6.2 average. He has been the league's top passer since last year, has thrown 10 touchdowns and has a 6.2 average.

Louis' two rookies are best in the runback department.

Johnny Roland has 185 yards on 15 punt returns and Roy Shivers has 447 yards on 15 kickoff returns. Larry Wilson of the Cardinals is tops with nine interceptions.

Brillion Downs Stockbridge

Rohrdanz, Behnke Pace Lions to 81-54 Triumph

BRILLION — Jumping out to a 20-10, first quarter lead, the Brillion Lions unveiled a high-scoring offense in their initial 1966-7 cage game, whipping non-conference foe Stockbridge, 81-54, here Tuesday night.

Four Brillion players hit double figures, led by Russ Rohrdanz and Dennis Behnke with 20 points apiece.

Daryl Bunnell paced Stockbridge and took scoring honors with 25 tallies. Tom Head added 15.

Brillion was never in trouble and led by 12 points at half. A red-hot, 26-point third period for the Lions made the score 62-30 with eight minutes left to play. The Indians, held to six points in the disastrous third quarter, rebounded with a 24-point final period.

Frank Robinson's Knee Operation Termed a Success

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Oriole outfielder Frank Robinson, who won the American League's Triple Crown of batting this past season, had a cracked medio cartilage removed from his right knee Tuesday.

A spokesman at Johns Hopkins Hospital said a smaller piece of cartilage which had broken loose also was removed during a 45-minute operation that was termed successful.

Robinson's knee was not put in a cast, but rather was just wrapped in a loose bandage so he can exercise the leg.

Robinson is expected to remain in the hospital for a week to 10 days, and then be on crutches another three weeks after returning to his Los Angeles home. After that he will exercise the knee for six weeks, and then start working with weights.

George Sauer Paces AFL in Pass Catches

Patriots' Nance Nearing 1,000-Yard Mark in Rushing

NEW YORK (AP) — There are two father-son combinations in the American Football League, but right now the Sauer have the edge over the Wilsons.

George Sauer Jr., whose father is the New York Jets' player-personnel director, took an undisputed lead Monday over George Wilson Jr., whose father coaches the Miami Dolphins.

While Wilson Jr. has taken over as the starting quarterback for the Dolphins, Sauer Jr. has taken over the pass receiving lead for the league.

Young Sauer grabbed eight passes for 144 yards in the Jets' 30-13 victory over Miami Sunday and brought his season total to 49—one more than Kansas City's Otis Taylor and Lance Alworth of the San Diego Chargers.

15.8 Average

Sauer's 49 catches have been good for 774 and a 15.8 average but Taylor, like Sauer a sophomore, leads in yardage gained with 1,058 and in average per catch at 22.0.

Another second-year man, Boston's Jim Nance, closed in on the 1,000-yard mark in ground gaining, pushing his league-leading total to 992. Bobby Burnett, Buffalo's rookie halfback, is second at 602 while Oakland's Clem Daniels is third with 591.

Len Dawson of Kansas City regained the No. 1 spot in passing, taking over from John Hadl, whose San Diego club was idle. Dawson leads the league in touchdown passes with 24 and in average gain per attempt with a 9.12 mark.

Notre Dame Loses Scoring Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Notre Dame lost its college football scoring lead but retained its scoring defense lead, according to statistics released today by the NCAA Service Bureau.

The Irish, tied by Michigan State 10-10 Saturday, also dropped from second to fourth in total offense and slipped out of the top 10 in rushing altogether after being ninth last week.

In scoring defense, the Irish have yielded an average of just 4.2 points per game. Alabama is second, having allowed 4.6.

Houston leads in total offense, Tulsa leads the passing offense, and Harvard is tops in rushing offense. Houston also tops the scorers with 36 points per game to Notre Dame's 34.6 average.

AMC to Omit Dividends

DETROIT (AP) — Directors of American Motors Corp. voted this week to omit for the fifth successive time its quarterly dividend.

The nation's fourth largest auto company paid 87 1/2 cents in its 1965 fiscal year but made no payments in the 1966 fiscal year which ended Sept. 30.

AMC's sales were off sharply in the 1966 model run and they did not show much improvement in the early weeks of the 1967 model year.

The firm's directors, meeting in Detroit, were due to release later today the firm's annual report which was expected to show a drop over its 1965 record.

AMC officials reported that demand for its higher-priced Ambassador lines had shown some strength in the early 1967 model market but that public interest in its American, or lower-priced line, had lagged behind a year ago.

Heightened Interest Prompts Move

NBA Will Expand to 12 Teams for 1967-8

NEW YORK (AP) — There will be 12 teams in the National Basketball Association next season and 18 in 1970-71.

The expansion move was dictated by a heightened interest from cities desiring an NBA franchise and a professional market survey that revealed growing potential in many new cities for major league basketball. Commissioner Walter Kennedy said Monday at the league's fall meeting.

The NBA, which expanded to 10 teams this season with the addition of Chicago, will add two more clubs in 1967-68 and two more for each of three seasons after that.

Kennedy listed, in alphabetical order, the cities under consideration for franchises: Atlanta; Cleveland; Dallas-Fort Worth, Tex.; Houston, Kansas City; Minneapolis, Minn.; New Orleans, La.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Pittsburgh; San Diego, Calif.; Seattle, Wash., and Washington.

"Under primary consideration for the first two franchises are Seattle, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and San Diego," Kennedy said. In other action Monday, the playoff system was revised. The first four teams in each of the five-club divisions will be eligible for the playoffs, with the first place team playing the third place team and the second meeting the fourth in best-of-5 series. The survivors will then meet in best-of-7 sets, and the division winners will play a best-of-7 for the league championship.

Keith Barth's 657 Takes Pin Honors

Keith Barth slammed a 657 series in the Major Stretch League, at Hahn's, to pace Fox Cities men's bowling Tuesday night. Barth's top games were two 225s.

Dave Gruendemann fired a 654 series (including a 234) in the same league. Keith Gehring and Buzz Laux posted 631 and 630, respectively.

Sweeping honors in the American league, at Kimberly, was Wayne Kilsdonk, with a 253 line and a 629 set.

New Concept Being Created Of Banking

Service Institution Image Replacing Money Lending Idea

NEW YORK (AP) — Before the end of the year, banks here are expected to try an experiment that has, to a degree, been tested successfully in Chicago: They will accept payments for traffic tickets.

The idea was unheard of a decade ago.

The very concept of banks is changing. Once the handlers of cash and checks, many banks now view themselves instead as service institutions whose main job is to find a need and then satisfy it. Money may be incidental.

The big change, then, hasn't been merely the disappearance of fortress facades and stony smiles and their replacement with something more pleasant. The big change can't always be seen.

'Frightening Variation'

A vice president of one of the nation's largest "full service" banks commented recently that banking practices today would have disturbed his board of directors just three decades ago. "They would have been considered 'frightening variations,'" he said.

Two big factors are involved: Behind the revolution are machines, particularly the electronic computer. These permit banks to handle an enormous volume of paper work. They now are able to keep records, analyze them, transfer them at a pace once impossible.

Ahead of this revolution is the prospect of markets that never before existed. Modern America's middle class is growing. Affluence is spreading. People are buying, traveling as never before. And they use credit.

Credit Expansion

Since the Great Depression the use of credit has expanded, first slowly but in the past decade with an enormous surge. Despite this, the quality has remained high. That is, people have consistently paid their bills.

This fact, surprisingly, was learned slowly by some famous banks. Almost against their wishes they recognized that competitors did not share their view that easy credit was a financial sin.

"I could go onto a subway train right now and lend money to everyone on the car and I'd have a good rate of repayment," the bank vice president said. He wouldn't, of course, but his point was made.

One result of this is to find application blanks for credit cards displayed at travel terminals, banks, restaurants, gas-line stations. Wherever you are a credit blank isn't far away.

These places of business run the gamut — restaurants, department stores, airlines. Wherever cash is used the potential is there for a credit card.

Leaves Record

Record keeping is one of the spurs to this type of activity. This is becoming a more complex and important problem for individuals, especially as viewed by the Internal Revenue Service. Cash leaves no record. Credit does.

Having become your personal accountant, in a sense, the bank is in a position to advise you and to recommend its range of services: Mortgage loans, checking accounts, safety deposit vaults, student loans.

All this is an intermediate stage. The eventual goal of this electronic banking is the cashless society. Accounts will be constantly updated whenever a purchase is made. Many bills will be paid automatically.

When this stage is reached in the distant future, your bank will be like a personal utility from which you draw to make purchases almost as you draw on the power company for elec-

To Your Good Health

Diet Not a Means to Relieve Sinus Trouble

BY JOSEPH MOLNER, M.D.

Dr. Molner: There was nothing about diet in your booklet on how to stop sinus trouble.

Do you have a diet to help relieve it, or specified foods to avoid, like milk, etc.? Please forward such suggestions. — A.A.

I'm sorry you didn't find what you wanted in the booklet, but I'm sorrier still that you

Dr. Molner evidently missed the essential point.

Demanding some sort of a diet to cure sinus trouble is almost as pointless as demanding one to cure a broken leg, or as fruitless as putting a splint on your leg to cure hay fever.

The booklet very specifically outlines the various factors which cause sinus trouble, and if you will take the trouble to learn which one or which ones are causing your distress, then you can make headway. There are but few cases of sinus which won't respond to the proper treatment.

Dr. Molner

The only way diet can have an effect arises if allergy is involved. This may or may not be combined with other factors: Irritation from fumes, physical malformation of the nasal passages, infected teeth, polyps, etc.

Allergy can, indeed, cause sinus trouble, although it is more likely to be a matter of being allergic to something you breathe: Pollen, house dust, feathers, molds, animal danders, plants, and the like.

In less common instances, a food allergy may be involved. In fact, that would be about the last place I would search for the trouble unless you had other signs of food allergies.

And even then, asking what to eat or what not to eat is a hopeless approach unless one first finds out what allergies are involved. Then, of course, it becomes a simple matter.

Foods which affect at least a few people are numberless: Milk, wheat, seafood, cantaloupe, strawberries, wheat or other grains, citrus fruits, eggs, chocolate. All sorts of foods which are perfectly good for most of us can cause allergies in a minority of folks. Drugs and medications also may be responsible.

If you happen to be highly sensitive to wheat, avoiding it will help you, but avoiding milk won't do a particle of good.

I certainly want you to get over your sinus trouble, but I don't see any hope for you unless you go at it logically. So read the booklet again and take it to heart.

Unfortunately there are people who insist with a strange stubbornness that some special diet can cure anything. Well, it just can't.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have heard that a person with a perforated ear drum must not ride in an airplane because it would cause blackouts or other problems. Please let me know. — E.B.D.

Since commercial airplanes have pressurized cabins, and the pressure remains pretty much the same as at ground level, I think it would be perfectly safe for you to fly. (People with plugged Eustachian tubes, however, may have some discomfort from flying — a feeling of stuffiness, inability to hear for a time after landing, headache, etc.)

Dear Dr. Molner: Do hookworms cause athlete's foot? My daughter-in-law is almost a cripple from it. — M.N.C.

No. Athlete's foot comes from a variety of organisms — either a fungus or a yeast. However, a hookworm usually enters via the feet and can cause irritation. The real danger from this parasite is that it may move to other parts of the body, and can cause serious trouble. Your daughter-in-law should consult a physician without delay.

Note to Mrs. A.A.: Cholecystectomy means removal of the gall bladder; salpingectomy means removal of a tube, one or both of the uterine tubes, between an ovary and the uterus.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble!" is the title of my booklet explaining what sinus trouble really is, and encouraging sinus sufferers to do something about it. For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

Today in History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 23, the 327th day of 1966. There are 38 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1774, the Minutemen were organized by an act of the provincial congress.

On this date: In 1899, the American government extended its postage rates to Puerto Rico, Guam and the Philippines.

In 1940, Romania signed the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo pact.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the bill authorizing the establishment of the "SPARS," the women's reserve of the Coast Guard.

In 1943, the historic Battle of Tarawa came to a victorious conclusion.

Ten years ago — Egypt was reported to be preparing to deport Jews in Egypt accused of being in collaboration with British, French and Israeli forces.

Five years ago — An Argentine airlines jet airliner crashed after take-off from Sao Paulo, Brazil, killing all 52 persons aboard.

One year ago — Communist North Viet Nam's President Ho Chi Minh reiterated his condition for peace negotiations on the South Viet Nam war — the complete withdrawal of American troops from Viet Nam.

World Festival Set for 1968 In Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Milwaukee's first world festival was scheduled Tuesday for July 20-28 1968.

The World Festival Board set the dates despite a protest from County Executive John Doyle that they might conflict with long established events, such as South Milwaukee's annual Spectacle of Music.

Festival Director Willard Masterson said the festival could include such events as an international air show, film festival, and an historical pageant.

Employment Drop Seen on Farms in '68

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm employment next year may dip below the five million annual average for the first time in modern agriculture.

The Agriculture Department said in a report that fewer workers will be used next year despite prospects that a much larger acreage will be planted. Employment this year averaged 5.2 million, down 400,000 from last year's average.

A similar decline next year would cut the work force to about 4.8 million.

A significant feature of the 1966 work force was that fact that hired workers declined proportionately more than family workers.

Farm wage rates averaged $1.03 an hour this year compared with 95 cents last year,

Exiles Seek Recognition In Exposition at Miami

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Cuban exiles have asked for representation in Interama, a projected permanent exposition here in which American republics will have pavilions.

The report said. It forecast a further increase next year.

Teachers' Further Education Ruled to be Not Tax Deductible

WASHINGTON (AP) — A teacher who quits his job and returns to school fulltime for further training cannot deduct his educational expenses from income for tax purposes, the U.S. Tax Court has ruled.

The decision issued this week could affect many professions — including law, nursing and others — in which members sometimes quit their jobs and go back to school to obtain advanced degrees.

Under present Internal Revenue regulations, an educational deduction can be taken only by a person who takes a leave of absence from a job or attends school part time, and then only for the purpose of improving a skill.

Red China Labels Plan for Admission Into U.N. as Absurd

Peking Says It Would Reject Leaving Formosa in World Body

TOKYO (AP) — Red China today restated its terms for joining the United Nations: expel Nationalist China and end U.S.-Soviet domination of the world organization. They underlined the prospect that the Peking regime won't get in for a long time.

An official New China News Agency broadcast rejected as "absurd" a resolution now being debated by the U.N. General Assembly. It would set up a committee to study the question of China's representation for the next year and is being reluctantly supported by the United States.

The Peking broadcast described the resolution as a trap to permit Nationalist China to remain in the organization and as a U.S. device to make it appear Peking has chosen to isolate itself from the United Nations.

'Smash U.S. Control'

"Everybody knows China's stand towards the United Nations under U.S.-Soviet control," the agency said. In September, Peking said U.S. control should be smashed and the organization completely reorganized.

In the American endorsement this week of the Italian resolution, chief U.S. delegate Arthur J. Goldberg stressed the importance of keeping Peking out. This was interpreted by some diplomats as a shift away from the hard U.S. line against membership for Communist China and a step toward a "two-Chinas" policy.

Both the Nationalists and the Communists are opposed to the two-China policy.

The Soviet Union rejected the Italian proposal this week but gave only lukewarm support to the argument that Peking alone has the right to represent China.

State Plan for Reorganization Runs Into Block

Kellett Committee Proposals Termed Too Undramatic

MADISON (AP) — The sputtering drive to streamline state government stumbled over the influential majority leader of the Wisconsin Senate Tuesday.

Sen. Robert Knowles, R-New Richmond, told the Kellett task force any omnibus package was "doomed to failure" and suggested reorganization efforts be divided into a number of specific bills.

"All the eggs are not going to hatch, I can tell you," the senator said.

Knowles, brother of the governor, made the comments as the task force's efforts to consolidate the dozens of state agencies into a cabinet-style government began crumbling with decisions to leave many departments intact.

'Sex Appeal'

One task force member suggested the effort needed the dramatic approach of a single bill as planned at present and noted the new assault on water pollution had been passed in that manner. Knowles replied, "It's a matter of sex appeal, and this doesn't have sex appeal."

The task force, headed by retired paper executive William R. Kellett of Menasha, backed

U.S. Pilots Step Up Air Assaults in Viet Nam

Gen. Taylor Dislikes Halt In Bombing

NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, holding that the bombing of North Viet Nam gives the United States blue chips for any peace talks, warns "don't pay a blue chip by giving up the bombing to get negotiations started."

He called for a "clear eye and a hard-nosed policy" in any approach to negotiations.

"We should come out not only with our shirt, but with a free and independent South Viet Nam," the retired general said.

Taylor, a special adviser to President Johnson and former ambassador to South Viet Nam, spoke Tuesday night at a dinner of the Manufacturing Chemists Association.

'Boost in Morale'

The air attacks on the north have given a "great morale boost" to the Saigon government and has "immobilized" 200,000 to 300,000 North Vietnamese, the general said.

Abandonment of the bombing of the north "would have a tremendous negative effect on South Viet Nam and they might possibly quit fighting," he declared.

Taylor said ground action is going increasingly well as a result of more troops and "for the first time we are putting a brake on the expansion of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong."

Four Die in Plane Crash Near Madison

University Students Were Heading East For Thanksgiving

MADISON (AP) — Four University of Wisconsin students leaving for a Thanksgiving vacation were killed Tuesday night as their single-engine airplane plowed into a farm field in fog and mist.

Two coeds killed evidently had responded to the pilot's offer of a vacation ride home posted on a bulletin board at the university, authorities said.

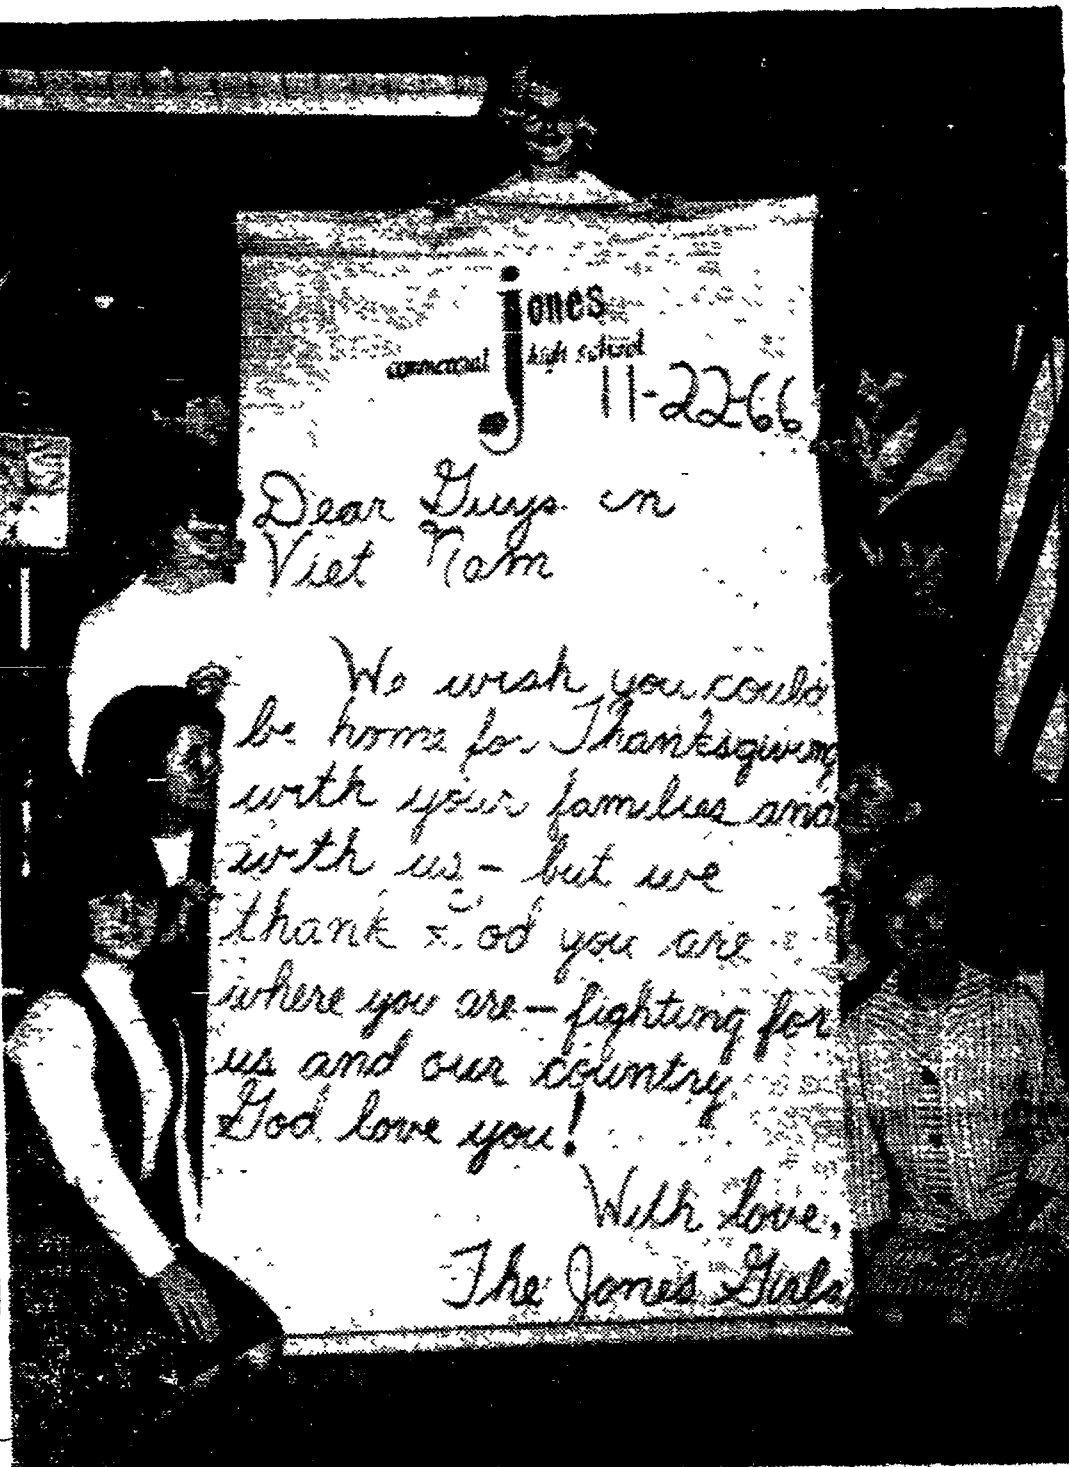

The aircraft crashed only five miles east of Madison half an hour after takeoff.

The victims were identified as Richard I. Gates, 26, West Covina, Calif., who was the pilot; Thomas M. Chapman, 23, San Diego, Calif.; Margaret Paula Jugel, 20, Oakland, N.J.; and Carol L. Chalfin, 19, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Near Highway

Officials at Trux Air Field in Madison said the flight plan listed Islip, N.Y., as their destination.

The aircraft plunged into the rain-soaked field within sight of Interstate Highway 94, the main route between Madison and Milwaukee. Curiosity-seekers clogged traffic on the expressway.

Gemini 12 News Conference

Aldrin Tells of Phenomenon

MANNED SPACE CENTER, Houston, Tex. (AP) — Gemini 12's champion spacewalker said today he saw a phenomenon while working outside his spacecraft rubbing his fingers together sparked a faint glow.

"I noticed the peculiar thing during the night pass," Air Force Maj. Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin Jr. told a news conference. "I think it's something we should look at."

Aldrin, who teamed with Navy Capt. James A. Lovell Jr. for the four-day Gemini 12 flight that rang down the curtain on Project Gemini, had no explanation for what it might be.

Over-all, Aldrin said, spacewalking "went quite a bit smoother than I actually thought it would."

Brief Disappointment Aldrin, a rookie who mastered the hostilities of space with three historic ventures totaling 5½ hours, returned from space with the world's title for space walking.

"We didn't run into a single problem that gave us any trouble," he noted.

Lovell said the two men had a brief period of disappointment shortly after they got into space and were chasing an Agena rocket for a rendezvous.

"Buzz noticed that the computer wasn't giving any change in range," Lovell said, explaining that the radar was supposed to feed the computer with data.

He added that he then looked at the control board and noticed that the radar had apparently lost its lock-on.

"For a minute we just looked at each other and said: 'Ah, it couldn't happen to us,'" Lovell said.

So, the two pilots resorted to their visual means of catching the target while not using the radar — something never done on a Gemini flight.

"I'm sort of glad we had radar failure because it gave us a chance to use the backup charts," Lovell added while noting that they were equipped with a sequence of secondary ways to complete the rendezvous.

"I think the maneuvers we made were more accurate than those given on the ground," he said.

Aldrin's travels, highlighted by a stroll lasting two hours and nine minutes, proved that by resting frequently and using proper restraint equipment, man can do meaningful work outside his capsule. Aldrin did not encounter the fatigue problems strollers before him met.

"I think we learned the great value of a restraint system," Aldrin said.

Simple Tasks To do a series of seemingly simple tasks such as hooking little rings to little hooks, Aldrin investigated the use of waist

Ground War Subsides for Thanksgiving

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. fliers stepped up their attacks in North and South Viet Nam while on the ground the fighting lapsed today into small scattered clashes.

B52 bombers pounded Communist positions in support of the American forces pressing Operation Attleboro in Tay Ninh Province and those in Operation Paul Revere in the central highlands.

The weather improved over North Viet Nam Tuesday for the first time in nearly two weeks, and U.S. pilots flew 59 bombing missions, an increase over recent days but still far below the average 150 missions of ideal flying days.

Plane Lost

One American plane was reported shot down, a two-man Air Force F4C Phantom jet. Both fliers were listed as missing. It was the 427th plane reported lost over North Viet Nam and the first since Nov. 11.

On another front, the U.S. mission announced a new, major effort to spur the pacification program, the civilian-directed campaign to win the allegiance of South Viet Nam's masses to the Saigon government. Deputy U.S. Ambassador William J. Porter, 52, was named to head the new attempt to make the flagging program succeed.

As the ground fighting subsided, the 360,000 American troops in Viet Nam and the 60,000 men offshore on 7th Fleet ships looked forward to the traditional turkey-and-trimmings Thanksgiving dinner Thursday.

In the scattered ground action, U.S. Marines supported by air strikes, artillery, naval gunfire and tanks reported killing 36 Viet Cong in clashes Tuesday near Da Nang and Chu Lai.

The Marines said they trapped one band of 25 Viet Cong on a small peninsula 13 miles southwest of Chu Lai and drove them to the sea. The Leathernecks called in artillery barrages and air strikes which killed 15 of the Viet Cong. The Marines killed the other 10 in ground fighting.

The Marines reported only light casualties.

House Leaders See No Reason For More Study

New Evidence on Assassination Not Revealed, Ford Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of both parties in the House of Representatives have rejected suggestions that Congress conduct its own investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Suggestions for a congressional investigation came from an adviser to the late president and several other sources, including Life magazine.

The magazine quoted Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who was riding with Kennedy in Dallas and was wounded during the shooting, as disagreeing with some of the findings of the Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination.

The controversy came to a boil Tuesday on the third anniversary of Kennedy's death.

Rep. Carl Albert, the Democratic leader, said, "There is no new evidence I have seen that would justify even considering that Congress take this up."

Rep. Gerald R. Ford, the Republican leader, who served on the Warren Commission that investigated the assassination, said "unless there is any new significant evidence, I don't think there is any need for Congress to investigate the Kennedy assassination — and I know of no such evidence."

Both Ford and Albert agreed that if some significant new facts are turned up they would not object to a new investigation.

Ford said recent books and articles casting doubt on the conclusion that Oswald acted alone are only "speculation based on the information, testimony and evidence carefully considered by the Warren Commission."

U.N. Accuses North Korea of Firing at Ships

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The U.N. Command today accused North Korea of firing at three South Korean navy patrol boats and of shooting at an unarmed training plane that strayed over the demilitarized zone.

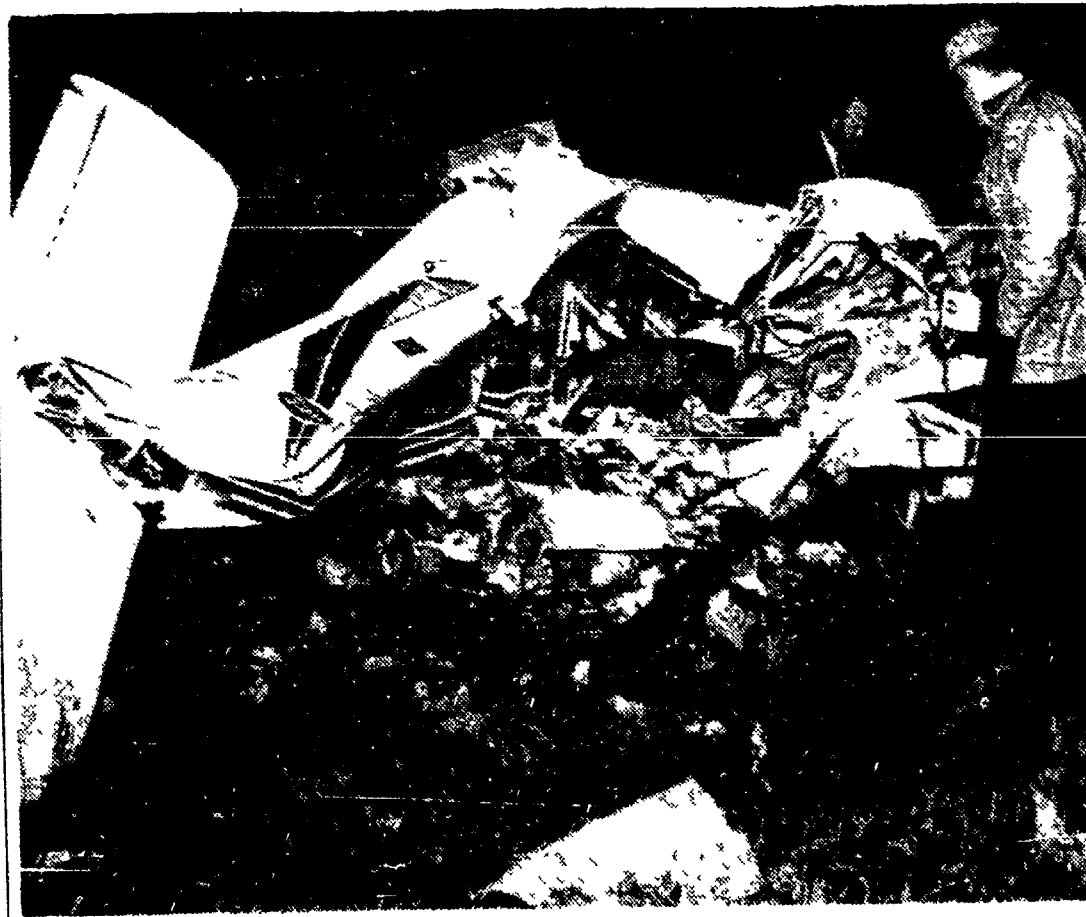

The command said Communist shore batteries opened fire on the ships Tuesday as they cruised off the east coast just south of the armistice line separating North and South Korea.

Around 40 rounds were fired by the Communists, and the South Korean ships replied with 14 rounds, they said. No injuries were reported but one ship was damaged slightly.

The North Korean Central News Agency earlier had claimed the boats were American. It said the vessels intruded into North Korean coastal waters and "fired scores of shells at our coast."

Budget for Manawa Set At $80,671

Rate Won't be Ready Until County, State Demands Are Known

MANAWA — An $80,671 budget for city purposes has been adopted for 1967 by the city council.

Because the city has not been informed of its tax obligations to Waupaca County and the state, the total tax rate has not been set. However, it is not expected to increase from the $41.25 per $1,000 assessed valuation of a year ago. A slight decrease is possible.

Making up the current year's rate were $23.47 for school purposes, $8.85 for city spending and $9.93 for county and state taxes. The 1967 rate includes $9.45 for the city and $22.75 for schools. Combined, they total 12 cents per $1,000 less than their counterparts for the 1966 spending.

$34.996 Levy
When applied against the city's $3,702,640 valuation, the city portion of the rate will produce a levy of $34.996.

Revenues anticipated from sources other than direct taxes against real and personal property are expected to provide $45,675, the difference between the budget and the levy. Outside revenues this year are expected to reach $47,275.

Making up the budget, which is $8,665 less than this year's $89,326.70, are:

General government, $9,571; up $565; protection of persons and property, $22,300, up $795; health and sanitation, $2,000, same; highways, $35,500, down $5,000; education and recreation, $8,150 up $3,894.30; charity, $100, up $15, and miscellaneous accounts, $2,650, down $7,425.

Youth in Jail Listed as AWOL, Letter Reveals

Outagamie County authorities learned, through a letter from an anonymous person, that a 20-year-old West DePere youth being held in jail has been absent without leave from the Army for several months.

The youth, Harvey Cornelius, has been in jail since Oct. 31 on traffic charges brought by county police. The youth was found guilty of speeding and of attempting to elude police. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail, lost his driver's license for six months and was fined a total of $125 or an additional 60 days in jail.

County police received the anonymous letter Monday. The writer said he was calling attention to the fact that Cornelius is absent without leave to "help him and protect this great country we live in."

Cornelius admitted to authorities that he is AWOL.

Outdoor Recreation Program Foresees Doubled Spending

Original 10-Year Act Financed by Annual $5 Million Cigarette Tax

If the Governor's Task Force lie of taxes, $30,000, .34 per cent on the Outdoor Recreation Act. These six items are up 50 per cent. The program (ORAP) adopts the $2,220,000.

Increased Percentages
Since the land acquisition program has been going on for four years, this percentage figure had the biggest change, a drop from 54 to 32.79 per cent. All other percentages are up, with the biggest increases in development and operation.

In other action, the committee increased the percentages to be spent on county forest recreation aids, highway easements and youth camps. At its last meeting the committee moved to form two more youth camps, and asked that at least one or more of the camps be mobile. Percentage of ORAP funds to be spent on these three projects is 6.87.

The group moved the inclusion of eight new programs for a total of $2,470,000 or 27.44 per cent. These are to be under the jurisdiction of the Wisconsin Conservation Department, except for historic sites and the hiring of an executive secretary for the outdoor recreation committee. Potato Warehouse Damaged by Fire

SHERIDAN — Fire Tuesday afternoon caused extensive damage to the roof of a potato warehouse here owned by Frito-Lay Inc.

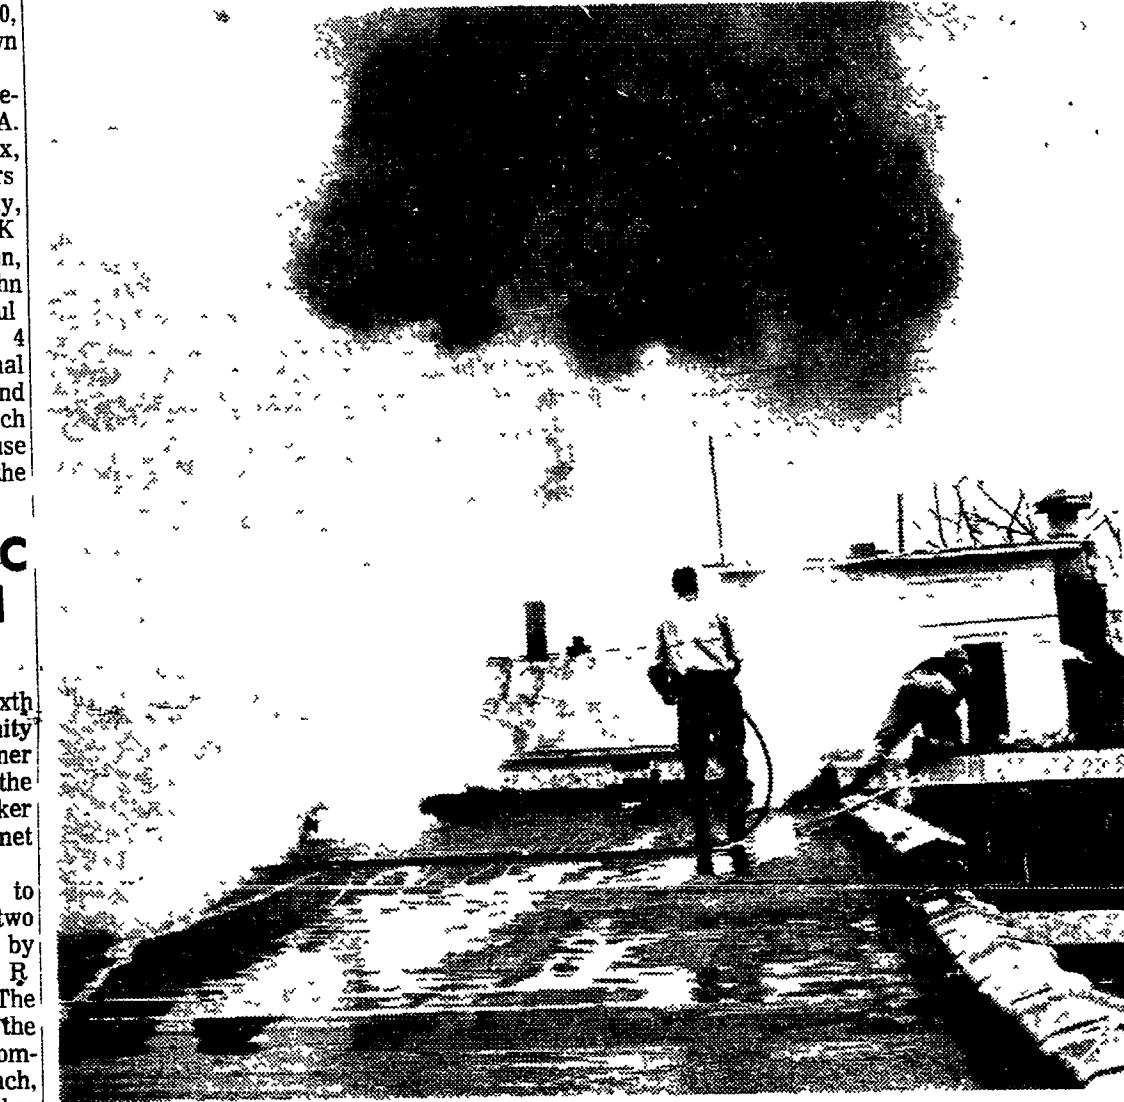

The blaze broke out at approximately 1:30 p.m. in the roof of the 35 by 90-foot building which is attached to the main warehouse.

Firemen from Waupaca and Grand Army Veterans Home fire departments battled the blaze for nearly three hours before bringing it under control.

Because the interior of the warehouse could be reached only through another building, firemen had difficulty in fighting the fire which was burning in wood shavings that served as insulation.

Cause of the fire has not been determined and an estimate of the damage was not made.

At the time of the fire only a few large crates of potatoes were located in the building. In

Schools to Name Joint Committee

STOCKBRIDGE — Committees consisting of two board members and administrators to study reorganization of school districts and formulate future plans, will be appointed by the Stockbridge and Chilton boards of education.

This decision came at an informal meeting Tuesday of the two boards. Official action to form the committees will be taken at separate board meetings in December.

Wolf Planners Call Land Conference

Seek to Solve Inequities in Reimbursements

New methods of paying local governments for state and federally owned lands will be discussed at a public lands conference Dec. 6 in Crandon, Forest County.

The conference, sponsored by the Wolf River Basin Regional Planning Commission, is designed to check into possible inequities of present state and federal reimbursements.

The large government units presently pay local governments for property such as national forests in lump sums rather than in the form of taxes. Wolf River commission officials said Wednesday they hope to come up with some ideas for revamping the reimbursements, both in amount and the methods used in determining the amount.

Of particular interest will be the Nicolet National Forest, a large wood land area in north-eastern Wisconsin owned by the federal government.

The conference will meet at 9:30 a.m. in the Crandon courthouse. State and federal legislators and town and county board chairmen from Florence, Forest, Vilas and Langlade counties have been invited.

Other Wolf River commission member counties have been notified as well as planning commissioners from Forest and Langlade counties.

The meeting is entitled "Impact of Federal and State Owned Lands on Financial Structure of Local Government."

Committee to Study Textbook Rental System Of 8 State Universities

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Abandonment of the textbook rental system, now in effect at eight state universities, is being studied by a committee of four university presidents which will recommend action to the Board of Regents of State Colleges.

Rental of textbooks, with a student option to purchase from the prescribed list, has been traditional at the state universities. At the University of Wisconsin at Madison, in contrast, students buy their own textbooks, which results in a somewhat higher cost to them.

The state university study results from a desire of some faculty members for greater freedom in choosing textbooks, officials said.
